

HELMET HELD HEROIN CACHE

But for a motorcycle accident last Aug. 8 in Central Saanich, a 27-year-old eastern Canadian man would not have been sentenced this week in Victoria county court to a total of seven years in prison.

Juan David Santos Anthony Maximilian Rodriguez was sentenced by Judge M. L. Drake after being convicted following trial on a two-count charge of possession of heroin Aug. 8 and Sept. 17 last year for the purpose of trafficking.

Driver Anthony Jacobs, 27, of Vancouver, was killed and Rodriguez suffered a permanent leg injury when their motorcycle went out of control Aug. 8 in Central Saanich.

While investigating the accident, police checked two motorcycle helmets and found each contained a balloon and the two balloons contained a total of 49 capsules of heroin.

Investigators replaced the 49 capsules with one of heroin and 48 filled with flour. Rodriguez was released from hospital in mid-September and claimed the helmets Sept. 17. He was followed by police to a residence on Admirals.

It was raided the same day and the two balloons were found in a hiding place, the 49 capsules still inside.

Drake imposed two seven-year terms to run at the same time after prosecutor Michael Hutchison said evidence indicated Rodriguez was a courier bringing heroin from the B.C. Mainland rather than an addict supporting his habit by trafficking.

He also said a pre-sentence report showed Rodriguez had been linked in Montreal with groups opposing Canadian law.

Progress lack riles workers

Provincial construction unions are preparing to take strike votes next week in protest against prolonged contract negotiations.

In Victoria, carpenters are due to meet Monday, and electricians and laborers on Tuesday.

Unless a settlement is reached in the meantime, strike votes will be taken at that time.

All unions involved in negotiations with the Construction Labor Relations' Association are expected to take strike votes between now and the end of the month so that they will be in a position to strike when the present contracts expire April 31.

About 35,000 construction workers are involved in negotiations, and union spokesmen have insisted that a new contract should be forthcoming when the current one expires.

They have accused CLRA of dragging out negotiations, in the hope that a substandard last-minute offer might be accepted.

B.C. TO BUY SITE — POLLEN

New Reid move 'just a feeling'

Next month's scheduled public inquiry by the provincial government on Inner Harbor development will never take place, and the government will purchase the Reid Centre property.

Mayor Peter Pollen casually dropped this double-barrelled "prognostication", as he called it, at his regular news conference this week.

"That's just a feeling," he told reporters.

Pollen deflected further questions as to what grounds he had for making such a prediction, indicating he had heard nothing from the provincial authorities since last week's imposition of development controls along the Wharf Street waterfront.

"I just don't think a public hearing would lead anywhere," he said.

"We (city council) have already been through agonizing months of formulating a reasonably comprehensive plan for the Inner Harbor."

"We have accomplished a great deal as far as the acquisition of foreshore for public use. To regurgitate all this at a public hearing... I just don't think the provincial government intends to go through with it."

The mayor said he wants to arrange a meeting with Resources Minister Bob Williams to discuss the possibility that the government might still purchase the Reid Site.

While he is at it, he said, and to test whether Williams and his cabinet colleagues "are as interested in the Inner Harbor as they say they are," he also intends to raise several other matters concerning harbor-area planning and development.

— Removal of the oil storage tanks on the provincially-owned Songhees industrial reserve and the "apparent lack of planning" in that area.

— Relocation of the Black Ball ferry terminal, which also stands on land leased from the government.

— The government's failure to conclude negotiations for purchasing the Marathon

Realty-CP steamships site below Belleville Street, since it replaced the city in negotiations several months ago.

— Cabinet opinion concerning the proposed hotel-apartment development on the Bapco Paint site at Laurel Point.

— And the problem of parking facilities for provincial government employees.

The inclusion of the Laurel Point development in Pollen's list of priorities for discussion appeared inconsistent with his assertion earlier in the news conference that he believes the project will receive provincial support.

City council favors the proposal, which is now progressing toward a public hearing and, apparently, toward a land-use contract.

But provincial approval is needed for the replanning of boundary lines under which street closures are accomplished and land equities exchanged. And there have been consistent indications that the government may move to squash the development, by withholding such approval.

On the civil servant parking aspect, Pollen said the government appears to be placing such faith in the popularity of its beefed-up transit system that it is providing virtually no parking facilities for any of its proposed new office buildings, including the eight-storey building for 1,500 employees to be constructed on the site of Pandora Ave. headquarters being vacated by B.C. Hydro.

"It seems you either use the buses or you walk," he remarked.

Pollen said the provincial government so far has shown little interest in the city's suggestion that Memorial Arena parking lot be decked over to provide a massive parking facility for civil servants.

A new look vital need for unions

Only the trade union movement has the people and economic power to bring about social change, but it pays only lip service at present to social ideals, delegates to Victoria Labor Council were told Wednesday night.

"The labor movement was in the forefront of the social movement during the '30s and '40s," said John Fryer, secretary treasurer of B.C.

Government Employees Union. "But somehow we have fallen behind."

He said the only way to change that situation is to reform Canada's trade union movement, particularly at the Canadian Labor Congress level.

He presented a seven-point plan for change, which he said should be started at the CLC convention in Vancouver in May.

The internal structure of the labor movement needs to be straightened out, he said, by getting to grips with the issue of Canadian autonomy. Canadians should run Canadian unions, or Canadian sections of American unions.

There should be fewer, bigger unions—a union with fewer than 25,000 members has neither the resources nor the staff to do an adequate job.

The Canadian Labor Congress should have more money and more authority.

Breakaway and independent unions should be brought back into the trade

Mail strike hits city

Victoria postmen walked off the job Thursday afternoon joining a coast-to-coast work stoppage in protest against methods of automation and the introduction of the new computerized postal coding system. (See story on page 4.)

The strikes in mid-contract were sparked by the suspension of Montreal post office workers last week when they arrived at work wearing

T-shirts bearing anti-postal code slogans.

Montreal workers struck in protest against the suspension, and the unrest spread across the country, with employees refusing to work or working to rule.

The Montreal dispute was apparently the catalyst, setting off a general fight against automation, with the Canadian Union of Postal Workers estimating that 2,000 jobs will be lost when the system is totally automated.

The union is also opposed to a new classification of mail sorter — the operators of new machines — who are getting 70 cents an hour less than manual sorters.

"This category was put in when we were in negotiations, and didn't have a contract," Victoria postal workers' spokesman Stan Darlington said Thursday. "We want jurisdiction, and we don't want our people forced to move into these lower categories when Victoria turns over to the machines in 1977."

He said the issue is job security. "We have only security for the duration of

Rub-a-dub-dub, the street Ben will scrub

Ben Duckworth will be scrubbing Finlayson Street this weekend, erasing artwork which earned him a trip to the city police station.

It's the latest — and most colorful round — in the Finlayson traffic tussle which has seen barricades go up and come down. Both moves infuriated different factions.

Duckworth, of 1109 Finlayson, presented his views in white painted letters five feet high. His message: "85 per cent say NO."

He was just finishing up when a police cruiser hove into view. Off he went with the constable and there was talk of a charge of "public mischief."

The deal now is if he scrubs away the message, there will be no charge laid.

"At least I got the message through," commented Duckworth, after his short visit at the police station.

"It's about time city council started listening to the residents of the street," he said, explaining that a petition circulated by John Van den Boomen, 112 Finlayson, had provided the background data for his street signs.

"Eighty-five per cent of us want the street to stay closed. The other petitions were signed by people who don't even live in the area."

Duckworth said all he was trying to say, "was what the people say on this street and it's a pretty big no."

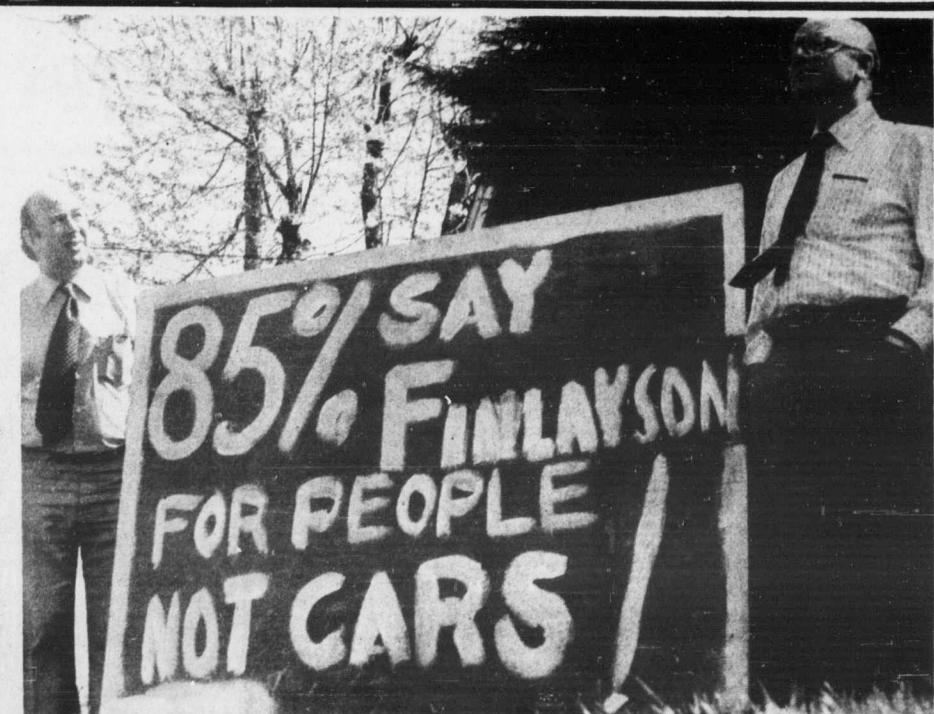

"There has to be a turn-around in thinking somewhere."

"We are concerned that homes and people do come first. Pressures on council have come from other people not residents on this street."

"It's legitimate. We want it closed and I got myself into trouble telling people — they even confiscated my paint and brush."

Council in the meantime, after a blast by Mayor Pollen, has instructed traffic engineer David Campbell to present recommendations for an overall policy on Finlayson.

And the public works department is considering paint removing tactics.

COLUMNIST'S CORNER

Just when a fellow gets around to thinking that maybe we can have world peace, after all, some darn fool on one or the other side makes an announcement that shatters the dream.

This time it's one Dr. Nicol Ozeretsky, a Soviet psychiatrist who recently took a long look at our western, capitalist way of life and went home muttering about cowboy pictures. Dr. Ozeretsky, it seems, had exposed himself to a horse opera in a Toronto cinema and didn't think much of it.

"This movie did not touch me emotionally," he told a Pravda interviewer. "Everybody in the picture seemed to be shouting, yelling and singing at the same time. The plot lacked purpose. The main characters were obviously trivial people and they were concerned with personal and unimportant matters. Such a picture would have absolutely no appeal for a Russian audience."

So once more we're reminded of that awful chasm between our world and theirs, and the doctrine of peaceful co-existence seems a hollow hope. People who can't agree on cowboy pictures are sure as shootin' never going to agree on more cosmic matters. A man incapable of understanding the motivations of the hero in a western is naturally a man to be viewed with suspicion for he's a man with a different set of values.

Fortunately, I don't take anything that psychiatrists say too seriously and I nourish the hope that Ivan, himself, given the opportunity, might be a fan of the horse opera.

I was going to say that things might have been different if Dr. Ozeretsky had been accompanied by an interpreter, but he would need more than that. He would need a student of the cowboy movie and, hurling modesty aside, I've no hesitation in nominating myself.

It is an acquired taste and I have acquired it. So I could have told Dr. Ozeretsky that what he referred to as "shouting, yelling and singing" is, in fact, an art form as rigid as opera, as stylized as the sabre dance. From the opening scene (long shot, lone rider seen approaching through the sage brush) it is all predictable choreography.

Cowboy movies' simplicity could hold key to world peace

The Chase, the First Fight, the Second Fight, the Unmasking of the Bad Guy, the Discovery of the Hidden Mine — these are all merely variations on a theme.

Getting the Drop on the Other Guy, for example, is pure terpsichore. Any alert child knows that when The Hero breaks into the hideout cabin and gets the drop on the bad guys there'll just naturally be one bad guy who will sneak up from behind and get the drop on him. Anything else would be unthinkable. In fact there wouldn't be any picture.

The whole pavanne is executed in an almost austere manner. A considerable number of violent deaths may be expected, but everyone succumbs cleanly and swiftly. Hero and villain are cast for easy recognition just as checkers are painted in contrasting colors. The whole shebang is an exercise in discipline.

Dr. Ozeretsky is farthest off base when he assumes that these are trivial people concerned with personal and unimportant matters. They are concerned with right and wrong, good and evil. The approach may be dissimilar to that of Tolstoy or Chekhov. The message is the same.

The cowboy fable endures for this reason. As characters they may lack verisimilitude. But their deeds are as solidly moralistic as any character in Aesop.

The one-dimensional hero demonstrates the triumph of wholesomeness, dignity, honesty, even abstinence. The cardboard villain demonstrates the inevitable defeat of double-dealing, avarice, booze and being unkind to your mother. We do not cheer the hard-riding hero. We cheer his purity of spirit.

Personally, I don't think these values are much different on the steppes of Russia than they are in the foothills of Alberta or Montana. A small boy from Moscow, with or without an interpreter, would have just as much an understanding of the invincibility of the cowboy hero as the small boy in Moose Jaw.

And—who knows?—perhaps if we had a little of that cowboy movie simplicity in our international affairs we might all find the hidden mine of world peace.

We welcome letters but please be concise. Letters must be signed and may be edited to meet space requirements.

Dear Sir:

It doesn't pay to shop at locally-owned stores. At least that's how I feel right now, having been stung again to the tune of $75.

A month ago I bought an inexpensive fabric at a local retail shop. It sewed up into such a rotten-hanging set of drapes that I decided I couldn't bear to use them. I'm not very good at complaining to managers so I figured: Chalk it up as a lesson—don't buy cheap material.

Today I was in a chain store and saw a woman return the identical material with the same complaint as mine. With little hassle her money was returned. So I got all inspired and raced down to the local shop with my crummy drapes. All I got was a few suggestions on what I might do that might fix them up a bit. No refund. Not even acceptance of my offer to use the money I'd invested as credit toward more expensive material. My only satisfaction was slamming the door on my way out.

And so I learned another shopping lesson: When an item is carried by both a local retailer and a chain store, patronize the latter. — Margo Foote.

Dear Sir,
I read with interest the letter signed by "The Brain", in which he criticizes our present system of government. I must admit there is a lot in what he says, but he overlooks one thing.

Our government has been taken over by the trade unions. They are the ones that tell us when we can live and die, when we can eat or sleep, whether we can have aircraft or not, whether or not we can have mail service, and I could go on forever. Not only that, the unions have made it quite clear that they are a privileged class. The law does not apply to them, and they can break it at will. After all, the government is scared of them.

The evil in our society today is not government, or the form of that government, but the power of the trade unions over us. Any politician who has the guts (and that's all it takes) to stand up to the unions and bring them back down off their pedestals to a fair and reasonable level in our society, and who can place them under the law again, so that if they ignore injunctions or break the law in any way whatsoever they can be dealt with in the same manner as any non-union peasant is dealt with, then, that politician will have it made for life. — Harold Morton.

Drury hears demands of firemen

Federal firefighters across Canada made their own proposal to the Treasury Board Thursday while their union — the Public Service Alliance of Canada — was preparing to take ratification votes on a tentative wage settlement.

With commercial flights halted from coast to coast, because airport firemen refused to work, the firefighters were still in dispute with their own union, adamant in their refusal to consider the latest proposal.

The Treasury Board has offered to raise wages to $12,030 during the term of a contract due to expire in June, 1976.

"We want an immediate increase to that amount, along with another $500 before the end of the year, with an 18-month contract," said Don D the, firefighters' spokesman in Vancouver.

He said the counter proposal had come after a telephone conference with firemen from all airports.

"Some of the firemen back east are not out because of their own discontent but simply to show solidarity with out position. They are backing us up on this thing, and somewhere along the line something has to give."

The proposal followed an informal meeting in Victoria between ministry of transport and defence department firemen, and Treasury Board president M. Drury.

Drury emerged from that meeting saying little other than that he would not condone illegal acts.

The firemen, who are responsible for emergency services at federal airports and defence department property, have defied court orders and the PSAC to continue their study sessions. Montreal was the last airport to lose the services of emergency workers Thursday afternoon.

It was expected that Halifax would be one airport opening on a restricted basis by Friday.

However, even those airports which were open during daylight hours were handling only small planes such as DC 9s while Toronto was limited to only very small aircraft.

Talking to reporters after his meeting with the firemen, Drury pointed out that ratification votes are under way under the union.

If the settlement is ratified, he said, the firemen will be expected back to work.

He refused to speculate on possible action if west coast firemen did not return in spite of an overall acceptance of the package.

If the proposal is turned down, he said, the dispute would go to arbitration, a course that the firemen have said they would welcome.

The men have also said they would go back to work upon the appointment of an arbitrator.

this contract, but it still is not the kind of language we want in the contract."

Union president Jim McCall resigned his position Sunday as the postal workers continued their walkouts even though they have a valid contract until Dec. 31.

Postmaster General Andre Ouellet has been meeting with union representatives since that time in an effort to solve the dispute, but reaction from the postmen has continued to escalate.

some building trades a $2.30 an hour increase in wages and benefits over the next two years.

The offer would boost the basic hourly wage of electricians from $7.86 to $10.16; of plumbers from $8.90 to $11.20 and of ironworkers from $8.50 to $10.80. The $2.50, however, includes fringe benefits as well as wages, and the unions say the figure is not high enough, and the rest of the offer is unsatisfactory.

Other construction trades bargain as a joint council and they have no package to put before their memberships to date.

Opinion

The following is one of a series of articles of personal opinion by an Express Staff writer. The views expressed are those of the writers and not necessarily of Pugstem Publications or other Express staff members.

Teetotalers apart, most Victorians will agree that existing provincial liquor laws are enough to drive one to drink.

They await with increasing thirst Attorney-General Alex Macdonald's upcoming revision of drinking restrictions scheduled for this legislative session.

Apart from stifling fun, most would agree the existing laws do not curb alcoholism.

They positively encourage the young drinker to drink himself silly in neanderthal barrack style.

Pubs now are not allowed to be anything more than beer-halls whose business is simply to dispense as much unvaried 25-cents-a-shot cheer in the 14 hours allotted daily.

They do not nor are they allowed to promote one of the highest forms of civilization; social drinking in a firm but friendly atmosphere.

Meters to peter traffic jam-ups

Two-hour parking meters will be installed in the vicinity of Oak Bay shopping village in an effort to cut down congestion.

The streets and traffic committee will recommend to council Monday that the meters be installed and traffic counts taken on side streets, such as Monterey and Hampshire.

Oak Bay board of trade spokesman Bert Wright told the committee that some residents had been clogging streets by leaving their cars on the road and using other transportation to go downtown to shop.

Mayor Brian Smith said a minimum of two hours parking should be allowed so people would have ample time "to browse in book shops" and enjoy leisurely meals at village establishments.

Some 30-minute meters are already established in one small area of the village. These will be replaced by new two-hour meters.

union movement even if compromises have to be made to do this.

The 60 per cent of the labor force outside the labor movement should be organized, and unions should stop fighting amongst themselves for jurisdiction.

The public image of labor should be upgraded—only two unions west of Toronto have public relations or communications staff, and union publications are presently the "most dreary type of press."

The leadership of the movement must be altered, to make way for people who are prepared to change with the times. Representation from the public service sector is necessary, but presently neglected in the make-up of the CLC, and the B.C. Federation of Labor.

TAX DEADLINE STILL APRIL 30

The deadline for filing federal income tax returns is April 30, but the taxation branch has no plans to extend the deadline because of the threatened postal strike.

A spokesman for the Victoria taxation centre said the branch has no contingency plan in the event of a postal strike. The last time the tax mail was halted across Canada, the taxation branch sent tax refunds by air freight.

Government sources said that if a decision is made later to give taxpayers more time because of the postal strike, it wouldn't be made until after the present deadline.

Approximately four million of the more than 10 million individual income tax returns expected this year still are to be received.

The department reported early this week it has received 6.2 million tax returns, processed almost four million of them and approved $650.7 million in refunds on 3.6 million tax returns so far.

Suddenly, Victoria's favorite swimming hole and palaces de danse of bygone days is humming with activity.

The Old Crystal Garden, where Mayor Peter Pollen claims he can hear the faint splashes of ghostly swimmers, is awaking from its long sleep to a steady stream of callers.

They're experts of various kinds—structural engineers, realtors, shrewd-eyed developers—and they're interested in basically one thing. What are the chances of bringing the old lady back to life?

To date, the front runners appear to be the provincial government's bureau of transit, which is anxious to acquire the property from the city for development of a downtown transit centre.

But the city administration is reluctant to see the stylish old structure given over entirely to such a mundane use as a bus depot, and Pollen says development proposals from the private sector will be considered.

A restaurant-cum-theatre, recreation centre or conference facility would be among the desirable uses, the mayor says. One entrepreneur now having a consulting engineer study the Crystal has a rather different idea in mind. He'd like to restore its watery role, in the form of a dolphin pool.

Meanwhile, when all the experts have departed for the day, those ghostly swimmers and revellers continue to have a ball, down amongst the potted palms.

No bite yet in Central Saanich

A wide-open election race for the Central Saanich mayoralty appears to be developing but no prospective candidates are committing themselves at this time.

High on the municipal pundits' list of those who will be making bids to fill the vacancy caused by the death of former mayor Archie Galbraith is acting mayor Jean Butler.

Mrs. Butler admitted she has given serious thoughts to running but has not come to any conclusion.

Other names being mooted as possible candidates are former aldermen Percy Lazarz, Ted Clayards and Don MacLaurin. However, none will declare their intentions.

Polling day has been set for June 22 with nominations closing on June 7.

There are 3,300 eligible voters in the municipality.

Pollen firm on concrete step

Despite the provincial cabinet's order last week banning any type of construction along the Wharf Street shoreline without specific cabinet approval, Mayor Peter Pollen has ordered work to resume on improving the Ocean Cement site.

"I am taking it upon myself to advise our (engineering) people to proceed forthwith," Pollen said at his weekly press conference.

He said the project of interim beautification on the site had already received the approval and funding of the provincial agency, the Capital District Improvement Commission, and he was confident the cabinet didn't intend to delay the work under its development freeze.

Pollen said it was essential that the site be ready for provision of temporary parking during the disruption caused by construction of the Government Street mall and related public works programs.

City manager Jim Bramley ordered the Ocean Cement work halted following last week's move by the government.

There are two sides to hardrock Percy

When you're a close-lipped, hard-mouthed hero it's pretty hard to win points on the popularity poll.

Percy Brown is such a man. Even his family admits he's a tough guy to get along with and deserves the title he's been dubbed — "Mouthy Brown".

In spite of this, two of his family came to his defence this week, roused by a report in The Express in which it was stated sports fishermen were indignant at Brown's refusal to use the 17-foot boat Respect for rescue purposes.

Respect was bought a week after Brown rescued two couples when the fishing troller Janola capsized off Beechey Head March 13, 1971. She was partially paid for by Brown, the rest of the approximate $5,000 price tag being raised by public donations and a $500 contribution from the provincial government.

Brown, who has since sold the Beecher Bay Marina, went out in a storm in a 12-foot wooden dinghy, pulling Mr.

and Mrs. Walter Wick and Mr. and Mrs. John Parris from the seas. Mrs. Wick and Parris, however, died of exposure.

Angry at the lack of a rescue boat in the vicinity — a popular area with sport fishermen — Brown borrowed money from his brother, George, ordered the boat, then went on a campaign to raise the rest of the money needed to pay for it.

When he sold the marina he took the boat with him. A petition, circulated at Cheanuh Marina and signed by more than 100 people, claims he had no right to withdraw Respect from service. Contacted by The Express,

Mesher rites

Funeral services were held this week for Miss Vera M. Mesher, who died at the age of 69 after working for the municipality of Esquimalt for 38 years.

Miss Mesher, formerly of 459 Admirals, was educated at Lamson Street School, later became secretary to the Esquimalt police chief and was municipal clerk in 1945. She retired in July, 1964, but continued her active role in the Pythian Sisters.

The daughter of James F. Mesher, well-known as postmaster for the old town of Esquimalt, she is survived by a brother, Darrel Mesher, and sister, Mrs. Eileen Thompson.

Brown's attitude was defiant. He said he felt no need to justify his action. Of the petitioners, Brown said, "To hell with 'em'."

His sister, Mrs. Flora Manion of Sooke, and her daughter, Mrs. Louise Charles of Metcheson, claim that Brown is being unjustly criticized.

"There's two sides to Percy," Mrs. Charles said. "People see mostly the bad but there's a good side that nobody ever sees. The man should be defended because he won't fight for himself. He talks tough and it's quite understandable that people call him Mouthy Brown."

Mrs. Charles said the criticism emanating from Cheanuh Marina is biased and based on a family feud. She and her mother assert that Brown still uses Respect for rescue work.

"He won't talk about what he does and unless you happen to see him towing in a boat you'll never know," Mrs. Charles said.

"Many a time the Respect has shepherd small boats in before a storm," said her mother. "She now has a loud-hailer and a radio-telephone (bought later by Brown). She salvaged a stranded boat and her crew from rocks west of Beechey Head. She picked up one family from the cliffs, where they had hiked and were too exhausted to continue. She's broken props and has had to have minor and major overhauls, all of which have been paid for by Mr. Brown."

Police nearing 'package deal'

Contract talks this week between the Victoria police union and police commission left the two sides "close to a package deal" that the union executive could take to its membership with a recommendation for approval.

Union officials who made that statement added, however, that one fringe benefit was unsettled and indicated the recommendation might be for rejection if the matter was not cleared up.

No figures were given by either side by the union officials said a one-year contract retroactive to last Jan. 1 was involved. They added they hoped the package deal would go before a membership meeting next week. Any Victoria settlement is expected to set the 1974 contract pattern for Saanich, Esquimalt and Oak Bay police.

'IRRESPONSIBLE'

Union hit by labor

The Hospital Employees' Union is totally irresponsible and its raiding tactics at two Victoria hospitals are indefensible, says the Victoria Labor Council.

The council formally condemned the union, in the wake of its application to the Labor Relations Board for the right to represent workers in Mount Tolmie and Glengarry hospitals.

The workers are presently part of the Canadian Union of Public Employees, Local 1311, along with workers at Sandringham and Glenwarren hospitals in Victoria and Simon Fraser at Prince George.

B.C. Government Employees' Union secretary-treasurer John Fryer told the council HEU is a "totally irresponsible union."

"They had a problem with their parent body — CUPE — over a dues structure and broke away from them, and now in turn they are trying to devour the parent," said Fryer.

The resolution condemning HEU pointed out that the private hospital workers had first organized themselves, and asked to be part of HEU and were turned down by that organization.

They were later accepted by CUPE, and backed solidly by that union and the labor movement, through the three-year strike of Sandringham workers fighting for a first contract.

"This is an embarrassing issue to discuss in public," said labor council secretary-treasurer Larry Ryan.

"When we have so many unorganized people in the province (60 per cent of the labor force is unorganized), all the action seems to be in the organized sector through raiding.

"HEU secretary-manager R. S. McCready has frankly admitted to this irresponsible conduct. Some of the principles he has expounded would lead to anarchy in the labor movement."

IWA delegate Jack Groves said HEU had threatened to take action against one of its own union members for helping the Sandringham hospital strikers.

"Now they are trying to split that local up," he said. "If they are successful in taking these two hospitals away, it would jeopardize the position of the other three hospitals."

"It seems," he added, "that they are getting an awful lot of support from the administrative and supervisory staff in this raid, and I think there should be a word of advice to those people to keep their noses out of union business and attend to the running of the hospital."

A suggestion that picket lines should be established at local hospitals where there are HEU members was referred to the executive for study.

"I am hoping very much that moral suasion may perhaps make HEU back off," said council secretary John Schibli. "If they hear our message loud and clear enough I think they will change things."

THE WORLD, CANADA

PM back from holiday

Trudeau

OTTAWA — Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau has returned from a week-long vacation in the Caribbean to face Commons criticism over widespread labor unrest involving postal employees and airport firefighters.

Firefighters at Toronto and Montreal International Airports walked off the job Thursday as strikes spread eastward. The airport firemen want regional parity with municipal firefighters instead of a nationwide contract. Virtually all commercial flights have been grounded and severe restrictions are being enforced at six other major airports.

Firemen at both Montreal and Toronto called study sessions in response to the Federal Treasury board's refusal to raise its wage offer. The Ministry of Transport banned all flights in and out of Toronto by aircraft weighing more than 25,000 pounds — virtually all commercial airliners. As a result, Air Canada cancelled more than 100 flights.

Air Canada officials met with MoT executives in Toronto to see if an emergency system could be set up involving the use of smaller jets such as the DC9. Other cities affected by the walkout include Halifax, Fredericton, Winnipeg, Edmonton, Vancouver and Victoria.

The Treasury Board has offered to shorten the contract from 26 months to 18 but has stood firm on its wage offer of a 31.3 per cent wage hike.

That would give the firefighters an annual salary of about $12,000 by October, 1975.

The postal situation remained confused at week's end with work stoppages in 45 cities involving everything from wildcat strikes to work-to-rule campaigns.

Postmaster General Andrie Ouellet met with representatives of the Postal Workers Union to try to find a solution to the dispute that began in Montreal last week. Talks collapsed earlier this week when Ouellet refused to discuss automation, which has now become the central issue in the dispute.

By walking out, postal workers are breaking a contract that runs until the end of the year.

However, Toronto union spokesman Lou Murphy said the issue was larger than a single contract.

"This present contract says that we have job security for all those employees that were employed prior to the signing of the last contract," Murphy said. "But that's not very good job security when you're having X number of people continuing to come in who haven't got the same job security and haven't got the same provisions in the contract. We're concerned if that group becomes the greater group, our jobs are in jeopardy."

"We've never been opposed to automation," Murphy added. "We're not opposed to the postal code. We're only asking people to boycott using the postal code until the question of automation is settled."

Murphy said the 5,000 Toronto workers who handle 48 per cent of Canada's mail do not intend to set up picket lines. They are reporting to the main sorting centre but are not working. Only about five per cent of the normal volume was handled Thursday.

Pollution report brings fines

TORONTO—Two CBC employees and a Toronto newspaper reporter have been found guilty in Ontario Supreme Court of violating an injunction concerning a documentary radio program on lead pollution.

The court set fines of $700 each for the radio men and $350 for the Globe and Mail employee. However, Mr. Justice O'Leary ruled that the fines will not be imposed if the trio pays one-sixth of the costs incurred by the lead companies in attempting to commit the defendants to jail.

The CBC employees are Mark Starowicz and Max Allen. The reporter is Graham Fraser. The plaintiffs are Canada Metal Co. Ltd. and Toronto Refiners and Smelters Co. Ltd.

Mr. Justice O'Leary said in his 56-page judgment he was satisfied the defendants had violated an injunction against parts of the program, Dying of Lead, which was subsequently broadcast. The newspaper next day printed portions of the script which had been ordered deleted.

Dismissed without costs was an application to commit to jail retired Globe and Mail publisher James Cooper and a senior CBC official, Eugene Hallman.

N.Y. lawyers' probe could disbar Nixon

NEW YORK — They're driving nails into President Richard Nixon's coffin and everyone, it seems, is grabbing a hammer.

Latest group to get into the act is a committee of the new York City Bar Association which is investigating Nixon and four Watergate associates in proceedings that could lead to their disbarment as lawyers in New York State.

A copyrighted story in the new York Daily News says the probe also involves former attorney general John Mitchell; David Young, former co-director of the White House plumbers investigating unit that broke into the office of Daniel Ellsberg's psychiatrist; Gordon Strachan, former aide to H. R. Haldeman, and another unnamed attorney.

Similar investigations are under way in California on possible misconduct by former domestic affairs chief John Ehrlichman; Herbert Kalmbach, Nixon's former personal attorney and fund raiser, and Donald Segretti, who served a sentence for underhanded political activity in 1972.

Even Nixon's former aides are lining up against him. In Washington, former presidential counsel Charles Colson, a defendant in the Watergate cover-up case, joined special prosecutor Leon Jaworski in seeking a subpoena for additional White House tapes and documents.

Jaworski wants tapes, and documents relating to 64 meetings and telephone conversations between Nixon and his top aides, including Colson, between June 20, 1972 and June 4, 1973.

Watergate prosecutors, meanwhile, believe that E. Howard Hunt's demand for the president claims he was executive clemency was taken to Nixon two months before told about it.

Nixon said he was not informed of the clemency request until March 21, 1973, when he turned it down, claiming "it would be wrong."

But prosecutors claim the Hunt request was discussed at a meeting between Nixon and Colson in late January of that year, when Hunt was facing a jail term and was demanding assurances of clemency in return for continued silence about his role in the Watergate scandal.

The trial of Mitchell and Maurice Stans over a secret $200,000 contribution by financier Robert Vesco to the Nixon campaign fund continued in New York.

Stans took the witness stand and swore that he kept Vesco's cash contribution quiet because "privacy was his constitutional right under the law."

Stans, former secretary of commerce, said there was no payoff or return favors involved. Vesco's right to privacy "was behind the whole thing."

The contribution was made three days after a new campaign law went into effect in the U.S. requiring all contributions be made public. Stans and Mitchell are charged with perjury, conspiracy and obstruction of justice in an alleged attempt to impede a Securities and Exchange Commission investigation of Vesco, who is now a fugitive. The prosecution contends Mitchell and Stans tried to stop the SEC probe in return for the $200,000 contribution.

Simon

New post for Simon

WASHINGTON — U.S. federal energy chief William Simon has succeeded George Shultz as treasury secretary, pending senate approval.

President Nixon announced the move this week in what observers believe is a bid by the president to reclaim some of the broad economic powers he had granted to Shultz.

Nixon also promoted John Sawhill, Simon's top deputy, to federal energy administrator with instructions to press ahead with the effort to make the U.S. self-sufficient in energy by 1980.

Simon and Sawhill will assume their new duties when the senate confirms Simon's appointment. Shultz, last remaining member of Nixon's original cabinet, will then depart for private life.

Shultz's post as assistant to the president for economic affairs will remain vacant for the time being.

Deputy White House Press Secretary Gerald Warren said Nixon "will assume an expanded role in co-ordination of economic policy himself." He said Nixon will become chairman of the Council on Economic Policy, a position formerly held by Shultz, and added that Simon will not become chairman of the Cost of Living Council and the Council on International Economic Policy, two posts also held by Shultz.

WASHINGTON — U.S. Vice-President Gerald Ford appears to be teetering in his support for President Nixon following the Republican defeat in Michigan last week.

Spokesmen for the White House say Nixon is neither disheartened nor dismayed by the defeat but others in the party are concerned over prospects of their chances in November's mid-term elections.

"I think we have to be honest and candid and say that we took a licking," Ford said. "Naturally you don't enjoy taking a defeat, but the facts are we lost a very important election. I think it is our responsibility now to analyse what can be done not only in other elections coming up, but what we have to do to be successful in November."

An influential Republican senator, Charles Percy, says that what is needed is Nixon's resignation if the Republicans are to succeed.

Golan fighting on increase

TEL AVIV — Fighting on the Golan Heights between Israeli and Syrian forces over possession of Mount Hermon continued to escalate this week.

Syrian anti-aircraft guns blasted away at Israeli aircraft and there were artillery exchanges.

A Syrian spokesman in Damascus said tanks and guns are pounding away at Israeli troops on Mount Hermon, a strategic point on the Golan.

Patty a criminal?

SAN FRANCISCO—Patricia Hearst has been called a common criminal by U.S. Attorney-General William Saxbe.

Saxbe said he was convinced the young heiress was "not a reluctant participant" in the $10,000 bank robbery Monday in which two persons were wounded.

The question of whether she willingly carried a gun during the robbery is being considered by a grand jury. If the jury finds she was not forced to join the gang, the charge against her would presumably be changed from being wanted as a material witness to one of being a bank robber.

Miss Hearst was dragged screaming from her Berkeley apartment 2½ months ago, but in a taped message to her family April 3 she said had decided to join her captors.

the Symbionese Liberation Army.

Miss Hearst's father, Randolph Hearst, called Saxbe's statement "speech-making" and "speculation."

Saxbe said he doesn't know if Miss Hearst was the victim of an authentic kidnapping, as she alleges.

One witness of the bank robbery, Edward Shea, 66, said Miss Hearst shouted orders and obscenities during the robbery and left no doubt she would use the submachine gun strapped around her neck.

Pension change favored

OTTAWA — Both Conservative and New Democrat spokesmen favor proposed changes to the Canada Pension Plan which would mean monthly retirement payments of $350 by 1985.

Welfare Minister Marc Lalonde said the proposed scale would be exclusive of cost-of-living adjustments.

He said the changes, being discussed during second reading, provide for benefits to climb from their current monthly level of $141.24 to $250 by 1980 and then to $350 by 1985.

The higher payments would not go to persons already drawing from the plan.

Other proposed changes would provide benefits to widowers of women who contributed to the plan and higher benefits to children whose contributing mother dies.

Mortgage rates rise

OTTAWA—Mortgage rates have risen to 11 per cent on the heels of a one per cent rise this week in the Bank of Canada's discount rate.

However, house builders and lenders do not expect any significant drop in demand for mortgages, which have gone up about two per cent in the past year. Potential house buyers are expected to pay the higher rates because they fear the price of homes will continue to climb.

In the Commons, Eldon Williams, Conservative MP for Calgary North, said he expects rates for first mortgages to increase to 12 per cent, rising to 16 per cent for second mortgages.

Guild strikes Sudbury Star

SUDBURY—Employees of the Sudbury Star, represented by The Newspaper Guild, have gone on strike against the Thomson-owned newspaper.

The Guild has been seeking a first contract for employees in the editorial, circulation and accounting departments since it was certified as bargaining agent by the Ontario Labor Board in April, 1973.

It's ugly but effective

They're not always sleek and streamlined, but they're one way to beat the high price of gasoline and the pollution problem. They're battery-powered cars like this one, the Sebring Vanguard that can run at 28 miles an hour for 59 hours on a single charge of batteries. The Florida company manufacturing them is coming out with the first 50 models. Most other models are in the experimentation stage but some are able to attain highway speeds of 60 miles an hour.

Millions returned

OTTAWA — The government has given back $650.7 million to taxpayers in overpayments so far this spring, the revenue department has revealed. The department, expecting more than 10 million individual tax returns by the April 30 deadline, has so far received 6.2 million and processed 4 million. Refunds went to 3.6 million taxpayers for an average of $180 per return.

Members of the Typographical Union and Pressmen's Union are supporting the Guild by refusing to cross picket lines. Negotiations between the company and the union are scheduled to resume April 25. The issues involve wages, hours, overtime pay and fringe benefits.

FAKE SIGNING JUST A FAKE

LONDON — A widely publicized report by a rich insurance broker that Prime Minister Harold Wilson's signature was forged to a letter promoting a land deal was a fake.

Two newspapers, the Guardian and the Daily Express, say 37-year-old Ronald Milhinch admitted he produced the fake letter as a gag to trick the press.

"The letter was never used, or intended to be used, in any deals and it wasn't used," the Guardian quoted Milhinch.

The Daily Express says it was told by Milhinch that he decided his hoax "had gone on long enough. It was a joke which had got out of hand. It snowballed and was never intended to reach the proportion it did."

Golf roundup

A practice round by a professional produced a sparkling six-under-par 64 at Uplands this week and helped serve to remind Vancouver Island Open competitors that Bob Hunt is still very much in the running for the matchplay golf championship.

John Morgan, whose bid as a late post entry in the Island Open was disallowed by the Victoria District Golf Committee.

stroke off the unofficial Uplands record of 63 held by Hunt.

A former City Amateur titleholder who plays to a scratch handicap, Hunt is one of the 16 survivors who head into the second round of the CFAA-sponsored Island Open this Sunday.

The action is at Uplands, and that's the track Hunt knows best. Hunt plays Cedar Hill's Greg Barnes in a head-to-head struggle that may ordinarily be termed a tossup. Home course knowledge could be the telling factor that sends Sunday's survivor into the quarter-finals.

The Hunt-Barnes match is one of several interesting matchups.

Defending-champion and medalist Bill Wakeham of Cowichan plays Bob Beauchemin, a talented southpaw from Gorge Vale.

Another southpaw, Hal Jacobsen of Glen Meadows meets Victoria Club assistant Rob Ferguson while Rob's big brother, defending City Amateur champion Cec, faces Ron Cush, a professional who plays out of Cedar Hill.

Competitors in the handicap section lead the way off Uplands' first tee at 10 a.m. with championship matches scheduled to start at 10:28.

The draw is printed below.

Also in golf, visitor Ron Semenik of Winnipeg, playing with Bill Thomas of Edmonton, Don Badger and Bill Olson, scored a hole-in-one on Oak Bay's seventh hole. . . . Also scoring an ace recently was Gorge Vale greenskeeper Wes Green, on the 14th at Gorge. . . . Gord Verley and Ken McNamara teamed up for a nifty net 57 to win the Challoner-Mitchell Cup, a best-ball competition for Oak Bay members. . . .

Quoted, fired

AMSTERDAM — After being quoted in a weekly news magazine as saying his club's decline was caused by too much "women and booze," George Khobel was fired as coach of the Amsterdam Ajax soccer team.

Ajax won the European Cup the last three years, but since Khobel took over nine months ago, the club has slipped to third place in the Dutch Soccer League.

Khobel later denied making the statement and said the club board was only using this as an excuse "to get rid of me."

Dated at Esquimalt, British Columbia, this 17th day of April, 1974.

G. MERZ, MUNICIPAL CLERK

Celebrate the return of Spring. With a new limited edition VW Sun Bug, sporting a dazzling metallic gold finish as bright as its namesake.

It has a sun roof to let in (what else?) sunshine, and the scent of a greening world. There's a touch of the wild in its mocha brown upholstery. And a touch of the wind in its jaunty racing wheels.

For the touch of your hands, there's a covered steering wheel, special sunburst shift knob and a rosewood-grained dash.

The Sun Bug is as carefree as a Spring morning. (Which it can afford to be since it's covered by VW Owner's Security Blanket.)

It gets about 30 miles to a gallon*. And last but not least, when you buy one of these extra-special golden cars, it'll cost you literally hundreds of dollars less than if you tried to make it extra-special yourself.

Who said there was nothing new under the sun? The Sun Bug Limited Edition.

Sunny days are here again.

Unbeaten Olympics eye 'crowning achievement'

Victoria Evening Optimist Olympics have accomplished everything a good juvenile soccer team can in B.C., except win a provincial championship.

They'll go after the coveted championship Sunday, when they take the field in the 1974 Sun Tournament of Soccer Champions at Kinsmen Stadium in North Vancouver.

Olympics are one of three Victoria teams to qualify for the provincial cup finals. Victoria Gorge take on Vancouver West Point Grey Legion in the fourth division final today and Victoria Lakehill Kiwanis go against Westminster Blue Mountain Thistles in the first division title match at 12:40 Sunday.

Evening Optimists play for the fifth division championship against Vancouver Fraser Bowl Chargers at 11:30 a.m.

A provincial crown would be the crowning achievement for the Olympics, who have captured the Victoria and Island championships and have scored 69 goals while allowing only five in going undefeated this season.

One big reason for the success of the Olympics is that seven of the players, Geoff Courtнал, Jim Lightbody, Ken MacFarlane, Russell Mosher, Paul Pynn, Russell Rimmer and Peter Skillings, and both coach Stu McFarlane and manager Tom Rimmer have been together through five straight seasons.

MacFarlane and Rimmer started handling the youngsters when they were eight-year-olds in 1969-70, and under their capable guidance the boys captured the division 8B league title that year.

Olympics went on to capture the league and Island division

8A titles in 70-71 and shared the sixth division league and Island titles in 72-73.

Only flaw in the impressive record came in the 71-72 season when the Olympics lost out for their perennial local rivals Lakehill, in the division seven playoffs.

In 72-73 they shared the Island title with Coulson and Prescott of Port Alberni and then lost a 0-0 game on corners to the same team in the B.C. cup rounds.

This year, Olympics defeated Coulson 7-0 in the Island final.

Olympics also scored a pair of impressive victories over tough Mainland competition to reach this year's provincial final. They got three goals from inside-right Mark Wyatt and downed Burnaby, 3-0, and right-winger Peter Skillings notched the only marker as the Olympics eliminated North Shore Burdette Beavers, 1-0.

Goalie Geoff Burkinshaw, converted from a centre two years ago, recorded the shutouts with defensive help from Ian Wells, Lightbody and Richard Roger.

Scoring threats along with Wyatt and Skillings are Courtнал and Graeme Littler, while halfbacks Pynn and Rimmer and inside-left Ken MacFarlane are considered by many to be the top mid-field combination on the Island.

Paul Studders, Graham Saunders, Mosher, George Stanley and Joe Mildenberger round out the squad, which appears a good bet to bring the Evening Optimist Olympics their first provincial title and the first-ever division five title to Victoria.

Rangers too hot, new champs due

The Stanley Cup is going to change hands.

Montreal Canadiens, who regained it a year ago by defeating Buffalo Sabres, Philadelphia Flyers and Chicago Black Hawks in turn, weren't up to the task of keeping it.

They bowed out in New York on Thursday night, beaten 5-2 by the Rangers in the sixth game of the best-of-seven series.

Canadiens, who never had the series lead, went under although they had a 2-0 lead and appeared to be in command as the game neared the halfway point. But the determined Rangers tied it within 46 seconds, and got what was to be the winning goal from Jean Ratelle in the 12th minute of the third period. Then Pete Stelmowski set a cup record by twice shooting the puck into the empty Montreal net in the last minute.

Rangers, who finished third in the National Hockey League's East Division, now move in against Philadelphia Flyers, West Division champions, in a semi-final scheduled to start Saturday night.

The other semi-final opened in Boston Thursday night, and the Bruins were ambushed, 4-2, by the tight-checking Chicago Black Hawks, who got still another standout performance from goalkeeper Tony Esposito.

Boston and Chicago resume hostilities on Sunday, and both weekend games are expected to be available for city television fans. The Saturday night game will start on Channels 2 and 6 at 4 Victoria time.

Canadiens, barely a reasonable facsimile of the team which had won six Stanley Cups in the previous nine years, learned again that part-time performance isn't enough. This time, though, there isn't another chance.

The dethroned champions were outplayed in the first period, but they managed a 1-0 lead when two of their determined types, captain Henri Richard and youngster Steve Shutt combined to get the puck past the inspired Ed Giacomin.

Shutt started the scoring play, moving in deep before passing to Yvan Cournoyer. An attempt at a backhand shot saw the puck deflected to Richard, stationed close to the crease on the left, and the veteran banked it in off Giacomin.

Canadiens had their best stretch of the game in the first eight minutes of the second period. Shutt, beaten seconds before on a close-in chance, scored on a play with Richard at 2:07, and it seemed that the series would return to Montreal.

Then it suddenly turned as the Rangers cashed in twice on the recurring defensive lapses which usually followed each time Canadiens managed to show some of their old-time form.

The scoring shots, the first by the surprising Bruce MacGregor and the second by hard-working Bill Fairbairn, both came after Canadiens had failed to get the puck out of their zone. It was intercepted at the points, first by Dale Rolfe, and shot back in to be quickly relayed behind Michel Larocque, who turned in another fine job in the Montreal goal.

MacGregor's goal was his sixth of the series.

Canadiens, who got little more than token performances from such important scorers as Frank Mahovlich and Jacques Lemaire, never fully recovered. They did manage a few promising chances but they were noticeably without much enthusiasm, and for the most part continued to play tentatively and without much cohesion. They were particularly inept during their power-play chances.

What was to be the winning goal came suddenly, but expectedly. Rangers had been dominating play when Ted Irvine fired the puck into the Montreal zone. Rod Gilbert sped in on the right side to get the rebound off the boards, and Ratelle also moved quickly behind the defence to accept the perfect pass and find an open goal.

The scoring play started in the New York zone, and was made possible because the wandering Giacomin had ranged far into a corner to get to a loose puck before Murray Wilson.

That Giacomin had time to start the play probably resulted from the way Canadiens had been warned off about doing anything when Giacomin left his crease. The last warning came in the second period when Cournoyer pinned Giacomin against the boards. It was a gentle-enough pin, but Ron Harris charged in with a cross-check, and then decked Cournoyer with a right before Pete Mahovich got up to take charge of Harris. Wilson made no move to chance a repeat of that scene.

Canadiens had three good chances in the last four minutes, the last one after Henri Richard won a faceoff in the Ranger zone as Canadiens attacked with six players. The puck came perfectly to Cournoyer in the slot, he teed it up but Giacomin went down to block the low sizzler.

There may be pain for Celts in Spain

GLASGOW — "Stay at home!"

That's the appeal issued by officials of Glasgow Celtic soccer club to fans who may be considering a trip to Madrid to support Celtic in the second leg of a European Cup soccer test against Atletico Madrid.

The appeal came in the aftermath of last week's savage first leg in Glasgow, one of the roughest games ever seen in Britain. Three Athletic players were sent off and seven were booked by the referee in addition to two Celtic players.

Atletico officials blamed Turkish referee Dogan Babacan and complained of ill treatment by Glasgow police while on their way to the dressing rooms.

In addition to rough tactics in the game, Jimmy Johnstone of Celtic was knocked to the ground in a fracas as players headed for the dressing rooms.

Glasgow soccer crowds are among the most fanatical in the world but no spectators became involved in the violence, which resulted in six Athletic players being banned from the second-leg match.

Champs ousted

Chicago Cougars, who upset the World Hockey Association's defending Avco Cup-champion New England Whalers in the Eastern Division semi-finals, continue their division final with the Toros Monday at Toronto.

Cougars, who finished fourth in the East, downed the division-champion Whalers, 3-2, at Springfield, Mass., to take the seven-game series, 4-3.

Chicago got third-period goals from Ralph Backstrom and Jan Popiel and a first-period marker from Joe Hardy, while outshooting the Whalers, 43-27, firing 24 shots in the third period.

Tom Webster accounted for the Whaler scoring with his fourth and fifth goals of the playoffs.

New England had won the first two games of the series, but then lost three straight games before forcing the deciding game with a 3-2 victory in Chicago.

Winner of the Eastern final will take on the survivor of the Western final between Minnesota Fighting Saints and Houston Aeros, to decide the new Avco Cup champion.

Thursday Minnesota 5, Houston 4. (overtime) First game of best of seven western final.

Two Pats share all-star honors

Regina players were involved in ties at two positions for berths on the Western Canada Hockey League all-star team announced this week by league president Ed Chynoweth in Saskatoon.

Centre Dennis Sobchuk of the Pats was tied with Ron Chipperfield of Brandon Wheat Kings and Greg Joly of Regina tied Ron Greschner of New Westminster Bruins for the second spot on defence.

Clark Gillies of the Pats was selected as the top left winger while Danny Gare of Calgary Centennials, the only unanimous choice in the balloting, earned the right-wing berth.

Pat Price of Saskatoon Blades, named the league's outstanding defenceman, and goalkeeper Larry Hendrick of Edmonton Oil Kings completed the squad.

Joly was the only repeater from last year's all-star squad. Voting was done by the 12 coaches and no coach could vote for players on his team.

In other balloting, winger Cam Connor of Flin Flon Bombers was named rookie-of-the-year and centre Mike Rogers of Calgary was judged to be the player best combining sportsmanship with ability.

Stan Dunn of Swift Current Broncos earned coach-of-the-year honors.

In playoff action Thursday, Toronto — Al Balding has been signed as head professional at the all-male PGA National Golf Club in nearby Woodbridge.

Bomb threat ends playoff

BRAMALEA, Ont. — Bramalea Blues have withdrawn from the Ontario Hockey Association Junior "B" playoffs against Hamilton Red Wings following on-ice brawling and a bomb threat.

Bramalea won a violent game in Toronto Tuesday night, 3-2. There were 190 penalty minutes and police had to break up brawling in division final, while in Swift Current the Broncos posted a 6-5 win over Regina to tie the eastern final at two games apiece.

The stands. There were several injuries.

Wednesday the Brampton Times received a telephone call warning that if the Blues came to Hamilton to continue the series, there would be a bomb on their bus.

Team president Gerry Anderson pulled the Blues out of the series, saying it's not worth risking his players' lives.

Blazers in dark

Expressly brief

The Russians are coming again, but this time they'll do battle with the WHA not the NHL.

Edmonton Oilers general-manager Bill Hunter has announced that four Canadian World Hockey Association teams will meet a Soviet National team in a four-game exhibition series in Canada this fall.

The Oilers or an all-star club will play the Russians in one game in Edmonton, but it is not yet known where the other three games will be played.

A Vancouver Blazers spokesman said Blazers were unaware of any game scheduled for Vancouver.

B.C. LIONS have signed quarterback Don Moorhead to a new, multi-year contract ending rumors that the former University of Michigan star may jump to the World Football League. He had been approached by two WFL clubs including Detroit Wheels, who have former Lion defensive coach Owen Dejanovich on staff. Lions have also signed three non-imports, two of them picked in the CFL college draft. They are wide-receiver Dave Kaduhr and linebacker Charlie Campbell, both of Simon Fraser University. Kicker Frank Gelling has been signed as a free agent out of the University of North Dakota.

Winnipeg Blue Bombers have signed veteran Paul Markle and rookie Kelly Cochrane, a quarterback from the University of Miami who has spent most of two seasons on the taxi squad of Houston Oilers of the NFL.

Goalkeeper Jim Rutherford has spurned offers from Vancouver Blazers of the World Hockey Association and signed a multi-year contract with Detroit Red Wings of the NHL.

SALT WALTHER, critically injured in a first-lap crash in last year's Indy 500, has entered two Dayton-Walther specials in this year's 500. Larry Patey of Salt Lake Eagles, who placed fourth in the Western Hockey League scoring race with 40 goals and 43 assists, has been named rookie of the year in the WHL.

Wayne Vollmer, the former touring pro, has become a teaching pro at Vancouver's Musqueam Golf Centre. Bill MacFarlane, president of the Western Hockey League, has again insisted that he hasn't decided whether to accept an offer to become chief executive officer of the Phoenix club which joins the World Hockey Association next season. Nick Durban, owner of Hamilton Red Wings of the Ontario Hockey Association major junior 'A' league, has decided to move the club to Brantford next season. Red Wings averaged only 900 fans in the past season.

Two titles for B.C.

VANCOUVER — British Columbia won two titles in the Canadian Bowling Congress, fivepin championships that ended this week at Commodore Lanes.

Jan Peters of Burnaby, who turned 21 on April 2, took the women's singles title with a 10-game total of 2,762, beating runner-up Donna Manchak of Winnipeg by 320 points.

Helen Robinson, the 1973 singles champion, led the way for the Vancouver team in the women's team competition with 2,761 for 10 games. Irene Ford, Hilda Munro, Betty Hunter, Dot Mallett and Gillie Potter were other members of the first-place team which totalled 12,385 points, 284 better than second-place Ontario.

Ron Stansfield, a 23-year-old from Dryden, Ont., took the men's singles with 2,792, finishing 180 points ahead of Bernie Sutton of Edmonton. Bert Griffin of Kelowna was third with 2,570.

In a close battle, Ontario edged British Columbia, represented by a Vancouver squad, 12,733-12,729, in the men's team event.

Macs tackle rebuilding chore

Junior lacrosse, much like its hockey counterpart, has its ups and downs.

One season a team can be fighting for the Canadian championship and the next, following graduation of top players, it can be scrambling to earn a playoff berth in its own league.

That's the position Victoria McDonalds of the Pacific Junior "A" Lacrosse League finds themselves in.

Coach Bill Munroe and team manager Barry Forbes, entering their 11th seasons with the club, have only a shell of the team which won league honours last season and took Richmond Roadrunners to the seventh game of the best-of-seven playoffs to determine the Western representative for the Minto Cup.

McDonalds have lost seven players to graduation, their leading scorer in 1973 to the Minto Cup champion Peterborough PCs and three other regulars for a variety of reasons.

Only seven players remain from last year's team and three of them are sophomores in PJLL action.

Winger Mike Walsh is entering his tenth season with McDonalds who started as a bantam team in 1963. Defenceman Norm Baker is in his fifth season, winger Jeevan Dillon is starting his fourth and goalkeeper Bill Robertson is heading into his third campaign with the club.

Defencemen Lori Gloeckner and Jamie Robertson are second-year McDonalds along with forward Rick Sage.

Munroe has been putting about 25 players through an intensive training program for several weeks and most of them will see action on Sunday when McDonalds play an exhibition game against Surrey Salmonbellies at Esquimalt Sports Centre.

All proceeds from the game, which starts at 2 p.m., will go to the Esquimalt Minor Lacrosse Association. McDonalds play an exhibition game next weekend in Delta against Richmond and then travel to Alberta for exhibition games in Calgary and Edmonton, May 4-5, against Junior "B" all-star squads. Lacrosse is growing in popularity in Alberta and organizers are aiming to field Junior "A" teams within the next two seasons.

The Victoria squad will open the regular season in Richmond, May 11, and play its home opener the following night against Coquitlam J-Hawks. McDonalds have six Sunday games, four Saturday and two Tuesday dates for their 12-game home schedule.

All home games will be played at Esquimalt Sports Centre. Sunday games start at 7:30 p.m. and other nights at 8 p.m.

Fans are likely to see an entirely different style of lacrosse from the McDonalds as Munroe has recruited many players capable of putting the ball into the net.

In past years, the team was built around star-goalie John Hamilton and a stout defence. But Hamilton, most valuable player, top goalkeeper and all-star last season, is gone as have most of the defenders.

Jim Lynch, Jerry Kustaski, Glen Neuman, Andy Reid, Mike Yeager and Rick Baker, like Hamilton, are too old for the PJLL and some of them are trying their luck in the new national Professional Lacrosse League in the East. Centre Dan Green, a 100-point scorer last season, has transferred to the PCs, while brothers Kim and Mark Bowles are recovering from off-season shoulder operations and Kim Browning has decided to return to Junior "B" action.

"Hamilton will definitely be the hardest to replace," general manager Bob Reid said this week, "as he was considered the best goalkeeper in the league for the last two years."

Robertson has been tabbed as Hamilton's successor but Steve Stundun, a graduate of Saanich E. J. Hunter Jr. "B" team, and Denny McLean of Esquimalt, presently playing with Calgary Centennials of the Western Canada Hockey League, will also be given a long look.

Saanich-grads Dave Loudon and Lee Hegan are expected to fit in on defence while former E. J. Hunter stars Kevin Alexander and Bob Cool are being counted on to provide most of the goals.

Alexander has had several impressive games with the McDonalds and Victoria Shamrocks of the Western Lacrosse Association and is considered to have one of the fastest and most accurate shots in B.C. lacrosse.

Other E. J. Hunter grads attempting to catch on with the McDonalds are forwards Mike Wilson, Kurt Robb and John Huddleston. Stu Thomson, Gord Neilson, Roy Sinden and Cleve Dheenshaw have been recruited from the Victoria Junior "B" squad and Ken King has been added from the Vancouver East Junior "B" team.

Blues toss Caps at Gorge squad

Two players signed to professional contracts this week by Vancouver Whitecaps of the North American Soccer League will be in action this afternoon at Royal Athletic Park.

Halfback Gerry Heaney and winger Brian Gant will see duty for Westminster Blues in a B.C. Soccer League match against Victoria Gorge-Molsons. Game time is 2 p.m.

Heaney, a former Scottish schoolboy international, and Gant, a member of B.C.'s team at the Canada Summer Games last year, were signed by the Whitecaps along with halfback Neil Ellet of Vancouver Italia. Whitecaps open their season early next month.

Blues closed to within two points of first-place Italia this week with a 2-0 win over Pegasus at Queen's Park Stadium. Both Westminster and Italia have two games remaining, including a head-to-head clash in New Westminster on the final day of league play, April 28.

In another midweek game, Simon Fraser University and Vancouver Columbian fought to a 2-2 tie at Capilano Stadium.

Gorge, which still has a slim chance at finishing fourth in the 12-team league, will meet Pegasus on Sunday in Vancouver.

In other BCSL action this weekend, Victoria London

Boxing Club will meet UBC Thunderbirds today and Greek Olympics on Sunday in a doubleheader in Vancouver while Italia will clash with Simon Fraser on Sunday.

Try nature . . . it grows on you

The oak desk was stacked high with letters. Some had spilled over on the floor. David Stirling, in charge of the provincial parks branch naturalist program, picked up one at random. It was from a Victorian — father of two children. It read:

"I'm 40 years old and last year I participated in your naturalist program at Manning Park. I didn't realize until then what I had missed. For the first time I became aware of the natural world — how much we depend on nature. It was an experience I shall never forget. . . ."

"We get thousands of letters of appreciation like this," said Stirling. "They come from people of all ages."

Stirling, along with Kerry Joy, in charge of nature interpretation, have seen the provincial parks program grow by leaps and bounds to become a major educational project.

In 1958 when former parksmen York Edwards, now assistant director of the Provincial Museum, and Ted Underhill, head of the branch's display section, initiated the program only a few thousand people availed themselves of the nature studies in parks.

Last year, 280,000 people participated in the program. This summer the figure is expected to exceed 300,000.

Joy explained that the growing interest in nature is because unspoiled wilderness areas are fast disappearing in many parts of the province. "When something becomes rare, it becomes precious," he said.

Joy does not know what effect the nature programs are having on the attitudes of British Columbians.

"We have never made a survey, but we know there is plenty of spin-off," he said. "More and more people are becoming aware that if you trample down beautiful alpine meadows, you more or less destroy them for ever. So they stick to the trail. It would take 1,000 years for nature to restore a sensitive alpine area."

Joy and Stirling said this summer the parks branch will employ a staff of 50 naturalists to conduct nature educational studies in 30 parks across the province.

Major nature programs are held in four parks, Miracle near Campbell River; Shuswap Lake, Mount Robson and Bowron Lake. These four parks have nature houses with displays of natural history, plus programs of nature walks and talks and slide shows.

Each of these park areas have their own special attraction — Miracle, beach and coastal forest; MANNING, ALPINE MEADOWS AND HIKING; Mount Robson, a large variety of mammals; Bowron, abundant wildlife and canoeing.

In other areas, such as Goldstream Park, the program includes nature walks and talks. The courses are not as extensive. Starting in June, Goldstream will have three naturalists — Freeman King, Jennifer Beckett and Kelly Allie. At present a nature program is being conducted in the park in co-operation with Greater Victoria School Board.

"The main aim of the program is to help people to get the maximum of pleasure in their holiday time in parks," said Stirling.

NATURALISTS Jennifer Fisher, left, and Pat Swift assemble text books and materials for provincial park summer program.

"There is, of course, another aspect," he added. "It is most important to inform people today about their natural environment, and to interpret to them the meanings of the land, the forest, the beaches and the water."

Pediatrics unit open at Jubilee

A new pediatrics unit with facilities to provide care for 27 children was opened Wednesday at Royal Jubilee Hospital.

The unit in the Bay Pavilion will operate primarily as a medical ward with special facilities for children whose care and treatment require that they be isolated. Construction on the unit began last September.

The unit was opened by the chairman of the Capital Regional District Hospital Board, Esquimalt Mayor Art Young, who urged Jubilee's board members to support the hospital board's recently announced concept of a single board of management which would be responsible for the operation of all acute care hospital facilities in the district.

Nuclear protesters will go to Comox

A motorcade of nuclear disarmament demonstrators will assemble at Victoria's Town and Country Shopping Centre early next Saturday to travel to CFB Comox where they will protest the storage of nuclear warheads at the base.

Guest speaker at the Comox demonstration — organized by the Victoria Peace Council to mark world disarmament week April 22-28 — will be NDP Comox MLA Karen Sanford.

The motorcade will assemble in Victoria at 8:30 a.m. leaving 9 a.m. for a 1:30 p.m. arrival at Comox.

Logging trials still up in air

Aerial log hauling trials by helicopter were halted temporarily this week by MacMillan Bloedel Ltd., while the most costly piece of equipment ever to be used in B.C. woods is re-engineered.

A $2.5 million twin-turbine Sikorsky S-11 helicopter has been taken out of service for about a month by its owner, Okanagan Helicopters Ltd., interrupting trials conducted on Vancouver Island.

The forest company hopes to have the machine back by the end of the month to conclude trials started last month.

Trials were first hampered by bad weather at a test site near Port Alberni.

The forest company says it will be some time before it can properly assess the full costs of the new technique which allows lifting of logs to a log dump by air.

No wane for U.S.

WASHINGTON — Continued inflation of more than 10 per cent will face U.S. consumers for most of this year, the U.S. Labor Department predicts.

Cause of the inflation is the soaring price of industrial commodities — the rough stuff of consumer goods.

The wholesale price index jumped 1.3 per cent in March, paced by a 2.9 per cent rise in commodity prices, including metals and fuel.

Wholesale prices, which filter down at various speeds to the consumer level, have risen 19.5 per cent over the past 12 months.

However, Herbert Stein, chairman of the Council of Economic Advisers, predicts the inflation rate will drop below 10 per cent by the end of the year, but says this could change if the prices of some metals rise much higher.

Copper has become so expensive in the U.S. that the U.S. Mint is asking Congress for permission to mint aluminum pennies.

Drury trying to explain soaring cost of housing

The act sets up community resources boards whose members are elected from each local area. Each community board will send a representative to the regional resources board, which will also have representatives from school boards and municipalities and three members appointed by the government.

Trustee Walter Donald called the section "purposely vague and purposely incomprehensible."

He criticized the regional resources boards created by the act, saying they will be another level of government not directly elected by the public.

"It will probably be dominated by unelected officials," Donald said.

"If this is a fifth level of government coming in at great expense to the taxpayers, there should be much more public discussion about it," Trustee Hal Knight said.

The high cost of housing is not caused by "rapacious mortgage lenders," Treasury Board President C. M. Drury told Victoria Chamber of Commerce this week.

In a brief speech, Drury, 61, said the cause of the cost of housing was deeper than some persons — such as members of the New Democratic Party who consider mortgage lenders responsible for the high cost — believe.

Drury said the "explosive urban growth . . . of many of our large centres" and the "use of real estate as a hedge against inflation" were behind the high cost.

He did not state any new policies to curtail the cost.

Drury also defended government spending by saying it is usually a "result of demand for services."

The federal government spends about half of all governmental expenditures, Drury said, and he pointed out it makes large payments to provincial and municipal governments as well as to individuals.

He defended equalization payments to the provinces by saying they allow all to be in a "position to provide a high level of government services."

Recycling shrinks

Plans for a $30-$40 million newsprint recycling plant near San Francisco have been scaled down by MacMillan Bloedel to simply a $7 million pulp plant.

Company president Denis Timmis said the firm has decided to "phase in" the plant in order to ensure a sufficient supply of raw materials is available in the area to support a recycling plant.

Last October the company had announced a feasibility study for a recycling plant which would have an annual capacity of about 100,000 tons of newsprint.

The latest plans are for a pulp plant which will produce 100 tons of pulp daily for sale on the U.S. open market for use in the manufacture of newsprint.

If it proves feasible, the unit will become part of a larger plant to produce newsprint from discarded newspapers. Current inflation, the cost of waste newspaper and unpredictable capital costs led to the decision to phase in the development.

FIRE RAZES SCHOOL

PORT HARDY — Temporary quarters are being found for 460 students after a $1 million fire destroyed Robert Scott elementary school this week.

The fire apparently started near an art room in the 16-room school. Only the gymnasium and the administrative wing were saved.

Police and fire officials are investigating the cause of the fire.

CAPTURED IN comely company at Colwood Shopping Plaza this week, veteran NDPer Tommy Douglas was back on Vancouver Island doing some fence-mending.

July vote in wind?

A general election in July—that's the prediction of veteran NDPer Tommy Douglas.

The diminutive but peppery MP has reiterated NDP leader David Lewis' pledge that unless the Liberals accede to reforms advocated by the New Democrats the days of the present minority government are numbered.

Douglas warned that the NDP could not go on asking for anti-inflationary reforms and continue being ignored by the Grits. His party would have to withdraw its support—and soon.

"We're not fooling... your credibility won't stand if you keep making empty threats," Douglas said the "crunch" would come before the end of May at the latest, when either an "opposition day" or budget presentation would give the NDP an opportunity to support Robert Stanfield and his Tories against the Liberals.

If the government was in fact defeated in May, a general election would normally follow eight weeks later, in July, he said.

Douglas was back on

Vancouver Island during Parliament's Easter recess and was interviewed while doing a brisk day's politicking in the Sooke area accompanied by Esquimalt MLA Jim Gorst.

Sitting down with reporters at a Colwood cafe, Douglas explained the reforms the NDP wants from the Liberal minority government.

—Selective price controls on Canadian produced commodities.

—Tax on excess profits.

—An end to corporate "tax rip-offs."

—Removal of the 11 per cent federal sales tax on wholesale building materials.

—Reduced interest rates (down to 6 per cent) for homeowners.

Douglas launched into a swinging attack on the "excess" and inflationary profits made by big corporations and cited the 86 per cent profit apparently made last year by "Garfield Weston's big empire of 133 companies" which he termed a "complete integrated operation."

"Siphoning" off such huge profits, he said, would be one way to check rampant inflation: "If they know you are going to take that excess profit away from them—let them take their normal profit, take away the excess profit—then they're not going to have the same incentive to be pushing prices up."

As for Barrett's pledge to remove the 5 per cent provincial tax on building materials if the federal government lifted its 11 per cent one, Douglas commented: "I hope he (Barrett) will do it any way, whether the federal government does it or not."

Douglas said that last year the Liberals had done what the NDP had required them to do in the field of old age pensions, family allowances and income tax cuts.

This year they'd made none of the moves that the NDP had urged.

"We think the significant thing is that last year the things they did they could do without stepping on the toes of their corporate friends. This year if they are going to be doing these things, they are going to make some of their friends mad at them."

Meighen

Tory predicts June 25 for election

A federal general election will be held June 25, national Progressive Conservative party president Michael Meighen predicted in Victoria this week.

Meighen, 35, grandson of former prime minister Arthur Meighen, made the prediction at a press conference held before addressing a joint meeting Tuesday of the Victoria and Esquimalt-Saanich Progressive Conservative associations.

Meighen said an election would probably have to be called because the "unholy alliance" between the Liberal government and the New Democratic Party is "breaking down."

Meighen, elected to the party presidency March 19, thought Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau might call an election before being defeated in the House of Commons.

"Trudeau might want to pull the plug before Dave Lewis pulls it," he said.

At the association meeting Meighen predicted the Progressive Conservatives would win the next election, whenever it is held.

The party, which now has eight seats in B.C., could win eight or nine more, he said. He said he based that figure on a poll taken by a Vancouver radio station earlier in the day.

The poll, Meighen said, showed 100 persons called to say they would vote for the Progressive Conservatives, 51 for the New Democrats, 13 for the Liberals, three for Social Credit and one for the Communists.

Province to grant scholarship

The provincial government will provide a scholarship to send one B.C. student to Pearson College of the Pacific in September.

In September 1975 the government will provide two scholarships to the world college, now under construction on a 75-acre site on Pedder Bay.

From 1976 on the government will provide three scholarships a year.

The college should have more than enough scholarships to cover the five or six B.C. students who will attend it in September, principal Jack Matthews told a group of high school students this week at Victoria high school.

Crown Zellerbach and MacMillan Bloedel lumber companies have both offered a scholarship, as has the Capital Regional Board, Matthews said.

He said he's "fairly confident" all 100 students arriving in September will have their $4,750 a year paid by scholarship. Thirty-six scholarships have already been confirmed.

Matthews revealed that it was a British millionaire, David Wills of Will Tobacco Co., who made the previously anonymous gift of money to buy the 75-acre college site.

He said Wills is tremendously idealistic about the United World College system. The colleges, in Wales and Singapore as well as Pedder Bay, bring together students around 16-19 years old from all over the world to study for two years.

Wills sees the colleges as being able to change the world, said Matthews.

"I know we can't live up to what he's expecting," he said. Matthews said about $2.6

million has been raised of the $4 million needed to pay for building Pearson college, but said people in charge of the fund drive are confident enough can be raised.

He expects 150 students from B.C. will apply for the five or six openings. Applications are still being accepted, and students should know in late May if they are accepted.

Bid made to stall day care controls

Day-care centre advocates have urged the provincial government to stall implementation of new day-care operation regulations until a commitment is made to cover costs.

"Some of the requirements to these regulations are impossible for most centres to meet with the available funds," said a joint statement by the Child-Care Federation, the B.C. Federation of Labor, the Vancouver Status of Women and the NDP Women's Rights Policy Committee.

The statement said alternatives must be found to a system which has produced new regulations drawn up by the Community Care Facilities Licensing Board to control day-care programs in B.C.

Under the regulations, centres could be forced to close for such things as serving milk to a child in an after-school program; allowing Sunday school children to use toilets when the centre is not in session; or allowing an age difference of more than three years among children.

"We have been told that it is not the intention of the board to close existing centres," the statement said.

Class try fails

No Grade 8 class will be added to Sentinel elementary school next fall, Greater Victoria school board decided this week.

The decision disappointed 27 parents of Sentinel Grade 7 students, who had petitioned the board to open a Grade 8 class in September.

Keeping the most-structured alternative school at 3861 Cedar Hill Crossroad at its present size — 120 students from Grade 3 to 7 — had been preferred by the school staff.

The board was told that an old annex behind the school could not hope to get the Saanich fire chief's approval as an extra classroom without extensive renovations.

The $8,000 or so the renovations would cost is not available in the board's capital budget, construction and maintenance head Sig Dietze said.

"keeping the world within your reach"

District Court

"It is always painful to sentence young persons to imprisonment," Judge William Ostler said this week in Victoria provincial court of a serious narcotics case involving a 17-year-old Victoria girl and a 27-year-old View Royal man.

But, he said, the B.C. Appeal Court "has over and over again directed lower-court judges" to consider deterrence is the main factor in sentences for such charges. So he sentenced Marianne Lorraine Hyciek, 311 Simcoe, to three months in jail followed by 18 months' probation, and Russell Thomas Weston, 5 Jedburgh, to six months imprisonment and one year's probation.

The two pleaded guilty March 29 to a joint charge of trafficking in marijuana March 9 at 311 Simcoe when an ounce of marijuana was sold for $15 to an RCMP undercover agent. Miss Hyciek also admitted possession of marijuana at the same time for the purpose of trafficking. Ostler said the B.C. high court had ruled imprisonment was mandatory in such cases unless there were "unusual circumstances."

He noted the two had no previous records, Miss Hyciek was helping a third person sell the drug and made no profit, and Weston only "fetched" the ounce.

But these circumstances were not unusual enough and Ostler added the two "were in this together... (they) had equal knowledge." He said Weston's term was longer because of his age and "experience in the community" and both sentences were "very modest."

Ostler made clear in the case of two Sooke area youths, John Ernest Planes and David Leonard Sudlow, both 17, that fines are not the usual sentence for break-ins.

He said he was imposing nominal fines in their case "so the boys will pay the fines. I would very much hope their parents will not pay."

Planes and Sudlow pleaded guilty March 26 to a joint charge of a March 11 break-in at a service station at 6872 Sooke, where two new tires, a battery, cans of oil and frozen foods were taken. Each was fined $100, given three months to pay and put on probation for six months.

Duncan Taylor, 21, of 948 Esquimalt, a recent arrival from England who stole food and luxury items that he wanted but couldn't afford, was sentenced by Ostler to one month in jail. He had admitted two break-ins and a shoplifting where items worth $850 were taken. Two of the victimized homeowners were Esquimalt policeman.

Lawrence Clarence Parsons, 23, of Clearwater, B.C., was sentenced by Ostler to five months jail followed by six months' probation. Parsons admitted attempting to steal items April 2 from a car in the Yates Street carpark and had a record of 13 convictions for theft and other offences in the past five years.

A higher-court trial was ordered by Ostler after a preliminary hearing of a charge against Donald Wayne Voden, 31, of 2916 Pickford, of criminal negligence causing death. The charge followed a fatal traffic accident last Nov. 25 at Trans-Canada and Skeena in Saanich.

Traffic court set a record for this year Wednesday when fines totalling $3,700 were levied by Judge E. F. N. Robinson against 10 persons who admitted impaired driving. The total was coincidence rather than a driving crackdown — the offences occurred on six separate dates between April 4 and 16 in Victoria, Saanich and Colwood.

Just a litter bit of pickup needed

Community activist Monte Vanton is looking for volunteers to pick up litter during Victorian Days, May 18-26.

Vanton hopes to get service clubs and schools to help in an anti-litter campaign during the celebrations.

"The idea is not only to keep the city clean when there are many visitors in Victoria, but to set an example," he said.

People interested should contact Vanton at 477-4439.

Skagit fight gets boost

The federal government has announced it will give financial support to the ROSS (Run Out Skagit Spoilers) Committee in its fight to prevent flooding of the Skagit Valley.

The ROSS Committee had been refused provincial assistance but a federal environment department spokesman said this week it will assist the committee in making representations to the U.S. Federal Power Commission hearing which start next week in Bellingham, Wash.

He did not say how much money the government will give the group.

Seattle City Light plans to raise the height of Ross Dam in the U.S. and flood 5,000 acres in B.C.'s Skagit Valley. The U.S. FPC is holding hearings on Seattle's plan and the ROSS Committee plans to appear at the hearings although the B.C. government has declined to participate.

The B.C. government's position is that the best way to fight the project is through the International Joint Commission which 30 years ago allowed agreements which led to the 1967 agreement between B.C. and Seattle allowing the Skagit flooding.

The B.C. strategy hasn't met with Ottawa's approval as yet because federal authorities fear if they contest one IJC ruling they may jeopardize other rulings which have been in Canada's favor.

Boy's condition poor after fall

Two-year-old Aaron Jones is fighting for his life in Royal Jubilee Hospital after he fell into an uncovered swimming pool in his back yard three weeks ago.

The boy, son of Donald and Jana Jones, of 1073 Newport, is in poor condition in hospital suffering from extensive brain damage.

Oak Bay police said the boy wandered off and fell into the swimming pool March 28. The pool had about two feet, six inches of water in it at the time, police said.

Aaron was discovered by his father at 5:45 p.m. but police did not know how long he had lain in the pool.

He was resuscitated by an Oak Bay emergency crew on the way to Royal Jubilee hospital but has remained in poor condition since his admission.

Teamsters' strike settled

A five-week strike by Teamster members at four Vancouver area auto carrier companies has been settled.

Employees at Ocean Terminals and Fraser Wharves Ltd. went back to work Thursday and employees at Canadian Auto Carriers Ltd. are expected to return Monday. The other company involved is Melchin Auto Transport Ltd.

Pete Moslinger, business agent for the Teamster Local 351 which represented the 200 strikers, said members won "substantial improvements" in fringe benefits but decided against a cost-of-living escalator clause in favor of more money.

The settlement calls for pay increases of $1.66 an hour over two years for top category drivers, and $1.35 for lower categories.

Awry curtain suggests nun's coil.

Echoing emptiness where Poor Clares once served

Awry curtain suggests nun's coil.

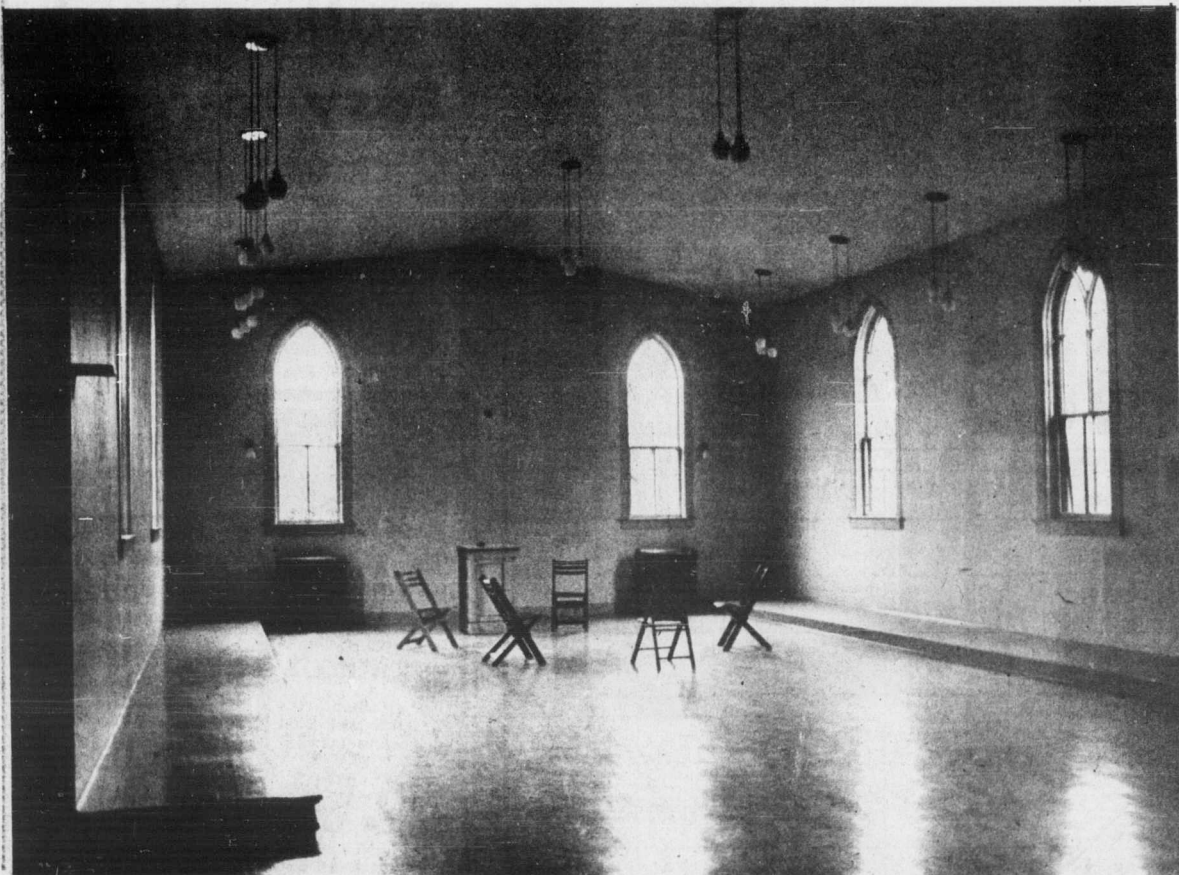

Stained glass evokes days of old church.

Prayer is still tacked above door in monastery.

Chapel, heart of monastery, is deserted now.

Only a white curtain slightly askew in a window indicates to public gaze that the Poor Clares have left their monastery on Haultain Street.

Behind the facade of the building there are rows of empty bedrooms, formerly called cells, an empty chapel, kitchen and refectory, hallways that no longer echo to the nuns' footsteps, and workrooms where vestments and altar cloths are no longer laundered and ironed, where communion wafers are no longer made.

When the sisters moved to their new home near Duncan last fall, they left behind a lot of memories. But they took their chores and their prayers with them.

One of the nuns, Sister Catherine, remembers the setting of the monastery 60 years ago. It was surrounded by open fields, she remembers, but now it is in the midst of a residential area.

Inside is evidence of the former cloistered life the contemplative nuns used to lead.

There is a grille in the chapel behind which the sequestered nuns used to sing for Our Lady of Lourdes Church, which was then a part of the same building.

"It was a very wistful experience to hear them behind that screen and to know that we would probably never see them," recently recalled Mrs. Mona Macgillivray, who has been a member of the church, now St. Patrick's, since she was a child.

Standing in the chapel, she pointed to another grille in the wall up near the ceiling.

"That opens out of the infirmary," she said, "so that sisters who were sick could hear the services."

There were sisters who were allowed to meet the public. They were called extern sisters and they were segregated from the cloistered nuns. This meant providing two separate housing areas.

The two areas were separated by a wall, and on either side of this wall there are two separate stairways from top to bottom of the building. Special skylights were installed to light the stairways.

Communication with the cloistered sisters was through wickets, called "turns." They were fitted with small barrels from which some staves had been removed. It was thus possible to exchange articles through the turns without visual contact.

This all changed about 10 years ago. The nuns still lead contemplative lives of prayer, and they still make communion wafers and take orders for printing.

But it's a different life from the one that was set up when four Poor Clares came to Victoria from New Orleans on Oct. 19, 1911.

They lived in a house while the monastery on Haultain was being built. The first mass was celebrated in the extern chapel on Dec. 8, 1912, and two days later the sisters moved in.

The extern chapel served as Our Lady of Lourdes Church until St. Patrick's was built next door in 1960 and became the parish church.

Behind the monastery are the spacious cloistered grounds with shade trees, garden, shrubs and lawn now showing the lack of cultivation.

Behind the high walls are walkways and garden grottos, now empty of their statues and candles, where formerly the nuns meditated and prayed.

Towering over one of the grottos is an air raid siren, itself an object of the past. Installed during the Second World War, it is still operable but, in the tide of changing times, it could be termed a relic.

Over the years the building has been altered and improved, but now it is too big and too old. There are bedrooms for 26 nuns, about a dozen too many.

In September, 1972, St. Patrick's parish bought the property from the Poor Clares for $75,000. It includes the monastery and one house on eight lots.

The future of the historic building is in doubt. Last fall the parish bulletin noted that "unless a practical use for the Poor Clare monastery building can be found by mid-November, the building will have to be demolished."

Last week the parish priest, Rev. Joseph Jackson, said there had been no decision yet.

He pointed out that it would cost thousands of dollars to alter the building to conform to plumbing, heating and electrical requirements of today, and it would cost a lot just to keep up the grounds.

Meanwhile, in front of the monastery, the statue of St. Francis stands guard. He looks sad, as if remembering the young girl the statue's donor wanted to remember; the young girl who died before she could join the Poor Clares those many years ago.

Perhaps that wistful look is a reflection on the swift, relentless passage of time.

Silent air raid siren towers over empty garden grotto.

Crash victim 'poor'

A Victoria man was in poor condition Thursday in Victoria General Hospital with a skull injury suffered in an accident Tuesday at Herald and Government.

Police said John Osborne, of 1597 Monterey Avenue, received the injury after the van he was driving on Herald Street collided with a car driven south on Government Street by David Gavin, of 316-1030 Pendergast Street.

After the collision the van slammed into a lamp post on the southwest corner of the intersection.

The impact threw Osborne out of his van and onto Herald Street.

Two passengers in Gavin's car were taken to Victoria General Hospital. Laurie Peleschaty, of 1619 Richardson Street, was in satisfactory condition Thursday with a head injury, and Debra Gray, of 196 Crease Avenue, was treated and released from the emergency ward Tuesday.

Police estimated damage to the vehicles at $3,800.

Mill sale 'right'

Crown Zellerbach Canada Ltd. is having no second thoughts about the sale of its interests at Ocean Falls to the province, company president Robert G. Rogers said this week.

Rogers told the firm's annual meeting that while Ocean Falls Corp. is successful in its newsprint production, "they have all the problems — and more — that we had when we decided to close down the facility."

"In light of the current buoyant demand for newsprint it might appear to some that we should be having second thoughts, but I can assure you that over the long term the decision was not just the proper one, but the only one for Crown Zellerbach," he said.

Addressing shareholders, Rogers said the company is bullish in its outlook and intends to continue to grow "here and elsewhere. We don't want to give the impression we are retrenching. That's not the case."

He refused to reveal what plans for expansion are being entertained by the company, indicating there wouldn't necessarily be expansion in the province in the near future.

The outlook for 1974 "continues to be very strong," said Rogers, despite difficulties of higher materials costs, inflation, higher government levies and labor negotiations. He said CZ is considering making more of its equity available to Canadians with the recent listing of the Class A shares (held by the public) on the Toronto Stock Exchange.

BLUE NEWS for the blue jean brigade. Levi's are about to jump from $14.95 to $16.95, following hike in January from $12.95. Poor cotton crop in U.S. which has created world-wide denim shortage, together with higher labor costs, are blamed. It could be worse. This set of Levi's, with 76-inch waist big enough to encompass Ian Scott-Moncrieff and Linda Dempster, cost about $60.

Spill source found — at last

Source of a 30,000 gallon diesel fuel spill which began on the Easter Weekend at the Canadian Forces' radar base at Holberg took until Tuesday to discover.

An armed forces' spokesman said this week: "They could see the oil spreading on the inlet but they didn't know what was causing it until it was really serious."

The leak was traced to an underground line, leading to one of the base's storage tanks. It had broken some distance from the tank and it wasn't until personnel checked storage tanks that it was realized one was losing fuel.

As late as 2 p.m. Tuesday it was thought the leak was small.

The base contacted maritime headquarters at CFB Esquimalt at that time, estimating the spill was about 300 gallons.

At 5:15 p.m. the full picture was known. CFB Esquimalt was contacted again and the spill reported to the ministry of transport regional office in Vancouver.

It was then realized that the spill "was no joke," the spokesman said.

Booms were rushed to the base on the northwest corner of Vancouver Island by the defence department and Rainier logging company.

Off-shore winds kept the fuel from reaching shore.

The spokesman said a commercial product which sops up spills with specially treated styrofoam blocks would be used to mop up the spill, which is being contained inside the inflatable booms.

Big organic push

Citizens Association to Save the Environment (C.A.S.E.) plans to promote organic gardening in a big way.

First, a public forum on organic gardening will be held in North and South Saanich Agricultural Society Hall, Saanichton Fair Grounds, on Monday at 7:45 p.m.

Speakers on organic farming-growing vegetables and fruits without using pesticides and chemical fertilizers — are John Dickman, Joe Wolownik and Reindeer Schuitema. The meeting will be the first of a series to discuss and initiate more organic growing in the Saanich Peninsula and Victoria area, Derrick Mallard, president, said.

Gwen, his wife, said a fair of featuring organic grown vegetables and home-made cooking is also planned for this fall.

Hotels slated for sale?

The Tally-Ho Travelodge on Douglas and its sister hotel in Nanaimo are about to be sold to a consortium of B.C. businessmen, it has been learned.

The price tag is rumored to be $5 million and the deal is expected to be completed sometime next week.

A spokesman for Tally-Ho said in Nanaimo "the rumor is correct in essence but not yet in fact."

He said an announcement will be made early next week. "As you know, nothing is sold until it's signed," he added.

There's no connection between the two Tally-Ho Travelodges and the one in Sidney.

Owner of the hotels to be sold is Al Pearce of Nanaimo.

The 450SE Sedan costs over $19,000. Other models start from $8,970. Here's why every Mercedes-Benz is an exceptional investment.

Sensible size, reasonable weight, good mileage, safety and resale value.

The Mercedes-Benz

FOR SOME MANUFACTURERS, a car with all of these qualities is years away. Every Mercedes-Benz Sedan has them all right now. Consider these qualities in more detail.

1 Sensible size, reasonable weight. An example is the 450SE Sedan shown above. Smaller than North America's best-selling sedan outside, but inside, big car room. And it weighs nearly half a ton less than the lightest domestic luxury car.

2 Good gasoline mileage. A smaller, more efficient engine with computerized electronic fuel injection, reasonable weight and a low drag shape. These are some of the reasons why a Mercedes-Benz 450SE gets up to 25% better mileage than domestic luxury sedans. And without sacrificing performance.

Bear in mind, these fuel-saving advantages are found in the Mercedes-Benz with our largest engine. Our 6- or 4-cylinder models offer even greater mileage benefits.

3 Commitment to safety. For instance, the Mercedes-Benz 450SE Sedan combines over fifty separate and significant automotive safety elements all engineered to complement one another.

No other manufacturer makes safety a more important element in car design. And no other manufacturer has held so long a commitment to better automobile safety as Mercedes-Benz.

4 Best resale value. Advanced engineering and fuel economy are two reasons why, after three years, Mercedes-Benz automobiles have a better resale value than the Big 3's standard or luxury cars. And not just better—the best. Who says so? The automobile industry itself.*

All of a sudden everyone wants design efficiency in an automobile. Mercedes-Benz has had it for years. Perhaps it is time you experienced it.

For more information, and a test drive, contact your authorized Mercedes-Benz dealer or write: Mercedes-Benz of Canada Ltd., 849 Eglinton Avenue E., Toronto, Ont., M4G 2L5. Ask about our dealer's leasing plans and our European Delivery Plan.

Archery pays off for mom

It could happen to you. What began as a Friday night hobby class brought national championship honors to Gerri Cosgrove of 1447 Edgeware last weekend.

The housewife and mother of two small boys is the new Canadian Indoor Woman Archer champion. She won the gold medal and trophy in the Winnipeg championships.

This gives her a triple crown — she is already Vancouver Island champion and had captured the provincial women's free style championship, held in Vancouver's Richmond Forum a week before.

Mrs. Cosgrove now has her sights set on winning the week-long outdoor championships that begin July 2 in Prince Albert, Sask.

The road leading to laurels began in the fall of 1972 when she enrolled in archery classes of Oak Bay Recreation Commission, held at the 'Henderson' Park pavilion Friday nights.

She became smitten with the archery bug through her husband, Neil, who had joined up the year before.

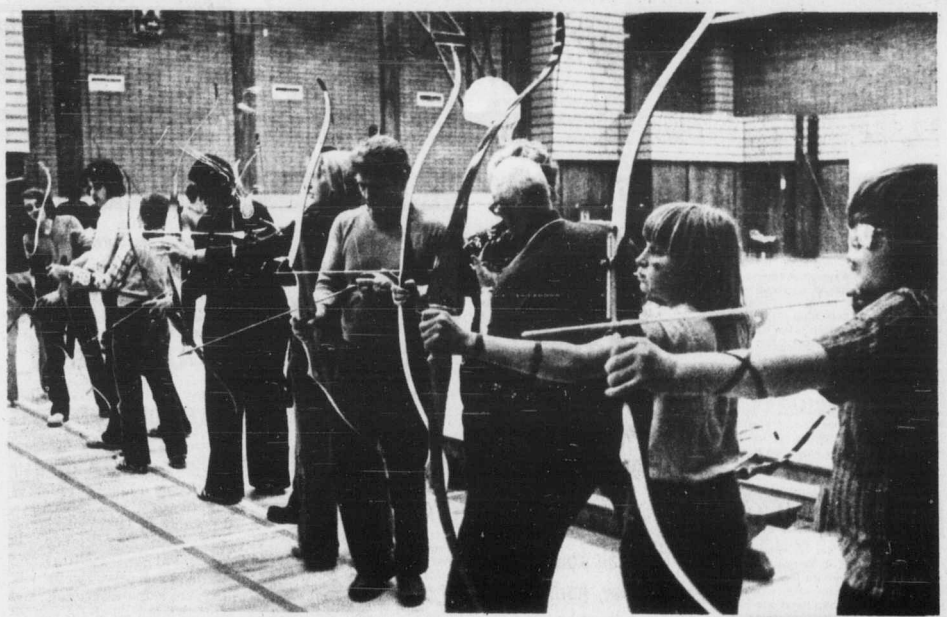

Now she's one of the stars of the Victoria Bowmen Club. Club member Fred Usher sparkplugged the evening classes four years ago.

Usher and fellow club member Roy Bishop still give time every Friday night, teaching other fledgling archers the intricacies of the fast-growing sport.

The indoor sessions, which begin at 7:30 p.m., draw participants from every age group and the Cosgroves are eagerly waiting for the time their sons — Perry, nine, and six-year-old Ricky, can learn to take a bead on a target.

Indoor lessons end May 10 when this year's classes take to the outdoor ranges of local clubs to try their skills in the open.

Another budding champion could be among their ranks.

Motorcycle trail riding gets government frowns

Neither Saanich nor the provincial government intend to allow for motorcycle trail riding in Cuthbert Homes Park development on Trans-Canada Highway.

A delegation of residents by the din of unauthorized motorcycling in the acreage between Admirals and Burnside roads west of the highway were reassured by Saanich Mayor Ed Lum at a council meeting this week.

Aldermen decided to inform letter-writer Douglas R. Heyd, 610 Sedger, that, contrary to the belief of residents, there are no plans to create a motorcycle park on the land.

Heyd and 53 others petitioned the council to have motorcycling prohibited from the proposed park.

"The noise is intolerable to the residents in the established residential areas nearby," they said in the preamble to their petition.

Such a park use would not be in keeping with other proposed uses such as beautification and walking trails, they said.

Lum said the provincial public works department — one of the owners of the land in the park — had asked for a meeting with Saanich to discuss the future of the site.

"The province is probably prepared to proceed with development of this area," he said. "As I understand it, use by motorcycles is out," he added.

B.C. Hydro, the highways department and Saanich are the other owners of land within the proposed park site. Saanich has considered the possibility of setting aside some land for use by motorcyclists as one means of controlling the noise and hazards of biking.

Budget won't stretch for parks repairs

The Victoria parks department budget won't stretch far enough to cover needed improvement at Stevenson Memorial Park, parks chairman Ald. Malcolm Anderson said.

Anderson said there are no plans this year to do any improvements to the small park on Pembroke between Cook and Chambers.

Anderson's statements came after complaints from the lacrosse association that the park was being ignored. The association uses the lacrosse box in the park five nights a week during the summer months and feels it is used enough to warrant improvements.

The box should be torn down and rebuilt and pavement needs to be resurfaced, a lacrosse spokesman said.

As well, the box needs a new gate, litter needs to be picked up and something needs to be done about hordes of wasps that plague park-users in the summer.

Anderson suggested the lacrosse association start a self-help program.

"We have little league fathers out in their parks mowing the lawns and grooming the mounds.

"The lacrosse people should come to us and tell us what they can do," Anderson said.

"Then we'll co-operate with them."

Anderson said he didn't think anything could be done about the wasp problem.

"The wasps were bad last year everywhere and they may just go away on their own accord."

Mel Simpson of the lacrosse association feels the park is being discriminated against because of its location.

"I think it's all in where you live."

Hospital wing action urged

An immediate start and early completion of a 75-bed acute-care wing at Saanich Peninsula Hospital was urged this week by Saanich council in a special resolution to Health Minister Dennis Cocke.

Mayor Ed Lum said it was "felt this was the fastest way" of developing facilities for acute-care treatment needed urgently in the capital region.

The move follows a meeting last week of the Capital Regional District health executive which agreed the 75-bed addition was the appropriate solution to the problem.

Directors disagreed with a confidential report recommending a new hospital be constructed in Saanich to provide the additional acute-care facilities. Lum had pointed out earlier this would mean at least two years' waiting time before beds were available.

By adding to the extended care hospital at Mt. Newton Crossroad, authorities could produce the new beds by year-end, the Saanich resolution said. The wing would be immediately beneficial to the residents of Saanich, Central and North Saanich, Sidney and the Gulf Islands.

Mobile Recycling Depot returns to James Bay

A repeat visit of the Mobile Recycling Depot is scheduled today for the James Bay area, Regional Recycling has announced.

During the initial trip April 6, 3,000 pounds of bottles, cans, paper and aluminum foil was collected by South Park Elementary students working with the service.

Times and locations today are: South Park Elementary, Douglas and Michigan, 10 a.m. to noon; Beacon Hill School, Douglas and Beacon, noon to 2 p.m. and James Bay Elementary, Simcoe near Oswego, 2 to 3 p.m.

They wait to be found

The 400 people who inhabit Ocean Shores, Wash., are waiting to be discovered. Their day of recognition could come April 27, 182 years after the British explorer Capt. George Vancouver is reputed to have sailed by their townsites without discovering it.

Nothing is confirmed but the townsfolk have hopes that sailors of the British naval reserve ship Discovery will gather on deck at midnight. Eyes glued on shore, the British tars could make the Washingtonians delirious with delight if they shouted in unison — "Hey, Bun!"

If they do, they will be hailing Bun Lewis, mayor of Ocean Shores, as part of the resort town's second annual Undiscovery Day festivities. Originator and promoter of Undiscovery Day is retired newspaperman and publicist Bob Ward, who is convinced that people do themselves a disservice when they refuse to occasionally take themselves unceremoniously.

"I called the British navy about arranging the 'Hey Bun' call but it was some sort of holiday there," Ward said. "I couldn't get anybody. When I call again I'm going to ask to talk to some of the older guys. They seem to have a keener sense of humor."

Ward pins his hopes on the trace of whimsy he found in the British character when he served overseas in the Second World War.

"They were mostly old enough to have seen a bit of life," he observed.

Plans for the first annual celebration called for a letter from the townsfolk being sent to the First Lord of the Admiralty. Designed to show their pique at Vancouver's explorational oversight, it was never mailed, being forgotten in the exuberance of the event. Instead, according to Ward, every man, woman and child straggled to the sandy beach around midnight, shouting over the dark Pacific waters — "Hey, George!"

Greeted only by the echo, they returned indoors to whoop it up again.

Problem-plagued Britain may be too immersed in its troubles this year for a voices-across-the-sea participation.

If British whimsy does win through, however, it could be the biggest whoop-an-holler Undiscovery Day of all time.

Oak Bay hires tree surgeon

Oak Bay is bringing in a surgeon to set up a diagnostic care program for its trees. The initial diagnosis of the trees' ailments is expected to cost between $6,000 and $7,000. Tree surgeon Michael Gye told the parks and recreation committee this week he estimated it would take between 85 cents and $1 to assess each tree "just as a doctor would a patient."

Gye said, excluding undeveloped areas of the municipality, there were 7,064 trees that should be included in the program.

Gye said the city of Victoria had a tree-care program in which every tree was checked every five years.

The committee will recommend money be voted by the estimates committee to cover the diagnostic part of the program, which Gye says will take between four and five months.

Mayor Brian Smith suggested the provincial department of recreation and conservation might be interested in helping to finance the tree program.

"After all, we have more trees per square acre than anywhere else," he quipped.

FORMATION MANOEUVRES are always a little dicey when you run interference, even when you're a platoon of swans and member of a breed looked on with favor by royalty. This platoon commander stoically carries on down the Gorge, hoping "tail-end Charlie" will catch up and the rest of his flock resist the lure from onshore enticements.

Sound of Spring

An appealing blend of music and fashion is wrapped up in The Look and Sound of Spring coming to Craigdarroch Castle next Thursday.

Sponsor of the show is the opera department of the Victoria Conservatory of Music and proceeds will go toward mounting a production —possibly Hansel and Gretel. All connected with the show are donating their time and talent, from fashion boutique Impacts and Imports, models Nancy Newton, Linda Dickie, Hazel Udell, Penny Moyes, Maude Parks, Cindy Sangha and Lois Blackley, to artists providing the live music

By Express Movie Writer

Hallelujah! The Harrad Experiment, the worst movie to hit town, has finally reeled itself up and rolled away.

It has, however, been replaced by three more pieces of pernicious pseudo-pornography.

One of the trio is moving into the same cinematic emporium, The Town at Humboldt and Douglas.

And, while many of the smut scenarios are unintentionally funny, this one is played purely for laughs and looks like the best of a sorry lot for an evening's entertainment.

Called Not Now, Darling, it's a British comedy in the Carry On mould and features many of the second bananas who have starred in many a really rank production.

For those who take their filth somewhat more seriously, The Fox at Hillside and Quadra is once again the place to head for a double dose of dirt, mingled with a little sex and sadism.

The back-to-back bill there is Women in Cages and The Hot Box and the burning prose which describes these two flicks is far from unfettered—white skin on the black market and their guns are hot and their bodies hard.

Ah well, like the philosopher once said: Different strokes for different folks!

Once again, this is a good week for drive-in fans, with a double-header at the Tillicum each of which was worth a couple of visits when it was downtown.

Top of the bill is Norman Jewison's flamboyant rendering of the rock opera Jesus Christ, Superstar—which is really for a much wider audience than the rock music part of the film might indicate.

The other film is also good, solid family entertainment—Cicely Tyson's magnificent performance as the black housewife in the depression days saga Sounder.

Meanwhile, elsewhere in town:

CAPITOL (Blanshard and Yates): The only thing great about The Great Gatsby, David Merrick's turgid transposition to screen of F. Scott Fitzgerald's powerful novel, are the inflated prices

Plenty of sex on screens

AT THE MOVIES

being charged to see Robert Redford and Mia Farrow.

CORNET (Yates between Blanshard and Quadra): Little Linda Blair isn't the only person who gets sick in The Exorcist—a great many members of the audience do, in one way or another.

COUNTING HOUSE (Broad and Broughton): Plans for the fire-hit Cinema 2 are still doubtful at time of writing, but American Graffiti continues to tell the way it was in '62 in Cinema 1.

HAIDA (Yates and Blanshard): It's been here before, but since Glenda Jackson picked up an Oscar for her role in it, A Touch of Class might be worth a re-visit.

OAK BAY (Oak Bay Ave): Manager Tom Wall continues with a paying policy of bringing back top-notch flicks at a reasonable price. This time, it's Fiddler On The Roof and, if you're so meshuga that you don't know the plot of that one by now, you deserve to have your chimney kicked over.

ODEON (Yates between Blanshard and Douglas): You've got a choice between fast-paced action in Odeon 1 and frantic fantasy in Odeon 2. Held over in Odeon 1 is the Goldie Hawn starrer Sugarland Express and in Odeon 2, likewise lingering from last week, is The Golden Voyage of Sinbad, a tasteful blending of live action and animation which lifts the film above the usual Arabian Nights sword opera.

ROYAL (Blanshard and Broughton): This year's top Oscar film, The Sting, a tale of Depression-era confidence men who zero in on a big-time hood as their target, is still in town.

Scope triumphs against marks

Marks awarded by adjudicators to entrants in Greater Victoria Music Festival may or may not have been gratifying—but they were not the most important factor.

What was important was the help offered by the adjudicators—suggestions designed to improve performance and widen the scope of existing talent.

Marks, as a matter of fact, are seldom announced publicly. Instead, contestants are given ratings, or the winners of first and second place only are announced. Everyone, however, receives the adjudication sheet outlining for further study the comments of the adjudicator.

For the gratification of entrants, teachers and parents, however, adjudicators have indicated in many classes that marks were uniformly high, with everyone in a certain class, for instance, receiving a mark above 85.

This has been true in dance classes, seen by adjudicators Dolores Kirkwood and Betty Caplette at Oak Bay Junior High school, while school folk dance classes at Central have been praised by Linda Hearn.

Ratings accorded in the school dance events are: 1, for excellent; 2, for very good, and 3, for good. Interestingly, Greater Victoria's new, more-structured school, Sentinel, was rated excellent in its first three events Wednesday in creative and folk dance classes.

Two very high marks were announced during the programs at Oak Bay Junior. Tuesday Dolores Kirkwood gave 90 marks to the Wynne Shaw studio for ballet, four or more dancers, open; and Wednesday a mark of 91 was given by Betty Caplette to the Theatrical Arts Studio for a musical comedy number performed by senior students.

Cream time at festival

Some of the cream of Victoria Music Festival talent will be on display Monday when the annual highlights concert at McPherson Playhouse brings to an end two weeks of music-making and dance.

Included in the program will be the Arion Male Voice Choir which adjudicator Earle Terry described as, "a superb choir which produces great moments of artistic and sensitive performance."

Others will be pianists Miranda Wong and May-Ling Kwok, singers Valerie Baker and Rose Bowl winner Judith Johnson; string players Mark Neumann (violin) and Gary Russell (cello) and accordionist Tony Qualizza.

There will also be a speech choir, a dance number, a performance by the brilliant young oboist Sandra Pumphrey and possibly also by hornist Jacqueline Spring and 10-year-old recorder player Deborah Jackson.

Accordian classes were topped off as the session ended Wednesday, with a brilliant LONDON — Tom Jones may have given North American movie-watchers their closest look at the lusty life of Olde England in the raw but Ron Jones has put the old-fashioned English breakfast on the tourist map.

Jones is the general manager of the new Athenaeum club in Piccadilly and his brian-child of offering the old-style English country breakfast has revolutionized the English dining-out life style.

Asking people to breakfast a year or so ago was tantamount to suggesting they had overstayed their welcome of the night before!
Now it's become the "in" thing to take your friends to the Athenaeum and give them a taste of what life was like in Britain 100 years ago.

The Athenaeum's breakfast menu was, in fact, written by Anthony Trollope and conjures up images of blustery country squires with big frames and the appetites needed to fill them.
The menu describes:

"The urn was thick and solid silver, as were also the teapot, coffee pot, cream-ewer and sugar bowl; the cups were old, dim, dragon china, worth about a pound a piece, but very despicable in the eyes of the uninitiated."

"The silver forks were so heavy as to be disagreeable to the hand, and the bread basket was a weight really formidable to any but robust persons."

"The tea consumed was the very best, the coffee the very blackest, the cream the very thickest."

"There was dry toast and buttered toast, muffins and crumpets; hot bread and cold bread, white bread and brown bread, home-made bread and baker's bread, wheaten bread and oatmeal bread. There were eggs in napkins and crispy bits of bacon under silver covers; and there were little fishes in a little box, and devilled kidneys frizzling on a hot-water dish; which, by the way, were placed closely contiguous by the plate of the worthy archdeacon himself."

The dazzling, dizzying world of a star

Being a star is hard work, as 130 children from View Royal elementary school found out this week when they performed for a CBC-Vancouver television crew, left, in Beacon Hill Park. Running around and spinning on the swing wheel for the cameras took two days, and by the time it was over, Arden Westling, right, was ready for a rest. Children will be singing as part of A Time to Sing, three half-hour variety programs featuring B.C. talent that start June 6.

Police probing break-in rash

Sidney RCMP are investigating a series of break-ins at businesses during the past week.

Police received the first report last Thursday after a rear door had been kicked in at Nadyne's Fashion Shop on Beacon Avenue. Nothing was stolen.

The following day someone entered Frederick's Shoes, also on Beacon, through the roof and stole $30.

Sea Shore Pet Shop on

Beacon and Phil Merritt Motors on Fifth Street were hit Saturday. Car parts were reported missing from Merritt Motors but nothing was stolen from the pet shop.

The fifth break-in was at Westport Marina in North Saanich. An $20 anchor was stolen.

Sidney RCMP refused comment on suspects or whether they believe the break-ins were done by the same person or people.

Volkswagen introduces the perfect car for its time.

The perfect car for its time is a new Volkswagen called Dasher, a remarkable car that does everything you want a car to do these days.

For example, high power and good gas mileage normally don't go together. But Dasher has an astounding new, four-cylinder engine that does a hot 0-50 in 8.5 seconds and also gets 28 miles out of the gallon*.

If you're like most people you want a roomy car. And you want lots of trunk space. But you also don't want a big car. Well, Dasher solves the problem. Technical innovations — some of them will amaze you — have kept Dasher's machinery incredibly compact. So while the car isn't big, the part where the people go is big.

Best of all, wait till you see how Dasher handles.

Dasher's drive wheels are up front, right under the engine. This gives you control you've never felt before in a conventional car. As well as traction on curves and in mud and snow and ice that's nothing less than spectacular.

Dasher also comes with a miraculous little thing called the Skidbreaker.

Miraculous, because the Skidbreaker causes the Dasher to move straight ahead as you brake, when one side of the car is riding on ice or snow, a normally ticklish proposition.

Dasher is designed to be reliable (who knows how better than we?). It needs maintenance only at 10,000 mile intervals. It's made easy to repair. It takes electronic analysis. And it's covered by one of the most advanced plans of them all, the VW Owner's Security Blanket.

The Volkswagen Dasher. Once again we've found out how to do it years ahead of anybody else.
